DATA ON LOCAL FARM PRACTICES IS RELEASED BY CENSUS BUREAU

7,893 Persons Are Now Living on 1,277 Farms in Princess Anne County.

BACK TO SOIL MOVEMENT IS TRACED IN VIRGINIA

Many Farmers Engaged in Other Work During Year, Federal Survey Reveals.

In a series of reports on farming and farm life in Princess Anne county and Virginia recently issued by the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce, it is revealed that a total of 7,893 persons are living on the 1,277 farms reported as in actual operation in this locality. This represents an actual increase of 139 persons over the number reported in 1930.

Farms listed as operated by whites totaled 897 and embraced 4,908 persons, of which only 49 lived in nonfarm residences five years prior to the count. Negroes listed 497 farms and a total population of 3,385, of which number 295 were listed previously as nonfarm tenants. While farmers and their families occupied 1,236 dwellings at the time of the count, while 1,866 dwellings were utilized by Negroes. Seventy-five white farms reported unoccupied dwellings, with 93 vacant houses on farms owned or operated by Negroes.

Virginia Report on Farms

Persons living on Virginia farms totaled 1,053,489, according to the special report, which represented an increase of 102,712 persons, or 10.6 per cent over that of April 1, 1930, including 784,404 white persons and 269,085 Negroes. A considerable part of the increase in the number of persons occurred in the counties in the western part of the State. Of the persons on farms, 40,053, or 3.8 per cent, lived in nonfarm residences five years earlier. The movement to farms was most extensive in counties adjacent to the State's more important cities.

Part-time work off the farm for pay or income, last year was reported by 72,485, or 38.7 per cent of all the farm operators in Virginia. Days worked off the farm for pay or income, totaled 9,315,355, or an average of 129 days per operator reporting. Almost 30,000 of the operators reporting part-time work spent 150 days or more off the farm for pay in that year. A classification of the principal occupations during the time gainfully employed in off the farm work indicated that 7,743 operators reported work in agricultural pursuits, and 49,508 in nonagricultural pursuits.

Continuance of Drought Poses Serious Problems for Growers

Rainfall for Month of May Is Far Below Normal Precipitation; Lawns and Flowers, as Well as Crops, Destroyed by Lack of Needed Rains.

Most significant item in the monthly meteorological summary issued yesterday by the Weather Bureau at Cape Henry for the month of May concerns the precipitation statistics, showing a total rainfall of .44 inches as compared with a normal rainfall for the month of 3.57 inches, a deficiency of 3.13 inches. Only one other May since 1874 showed a smaller precipitation, that of 1880, when only .18 inches fell.

Drought Condition Serious

So serious has the drought condition become in Princess Anne county that agricultural experts are predicting the smallest crops harvested in this section in many years. Chief interest lies in the probable potato crop, in jeopardy because of the continued dry weather in eastern Virginia and North Carolina. Whether or not the reduction in yield will boost prices sufficiently to offset the loss in production is problematical at this time, but the signs of such reduction are visible on every hand.

Although the dry weather is ideal from the standpoint of Beach patronage, residents of

LYNNHAVEN TRIO TO LEAVE V.P.I.

J. W. Cake, Jr., C. C. Mast and J. P. Mills, Jr., to Graduate Monday.

Among the 278 candidates for degrees to be conferred at Virginia Tech's sixty-fourth commencement exercises to be held on Monday morning, in Blacksburg, are three young men from Princess Anne county, all former students in the county schools. The three graduates, all from Lynnhaven, are J. W. Cake, Jr., Charles C. Mast and John P. Mills, Jr.

Parents and friends of the young men will attend the exercises, which will begin this afternoon with a demonstration of military instruction given at the school, scheduled for 4 o'clock. Commencement in the Officers' Reserve Corps will be presented at the regimental parade on Sunday afternoon, with Governor George C. Peery making the presentations.

Dances Begin Tonight

Dances will be held tonight and tomorrow night. A reception for faculty and alumni will be held tomorrow night.

Governor George C. Peery will make the graduation address at exercises to be held in the handsome new auditorium of the teaching and administration building built here as part of a PWA project. The first time this structure will be used is for the religious service at 11 o'clock Sunday morning, June 7 at which Rev. Dr. Ben R. Lacy, Jr., president of the Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, will preach the baccalaureate sermon.

At the graduation exercises Monday morning, Dr. Julian A. Burruss, president, will present the diplomas, and make prize and award announcements. W. J. Blacklock, Washington, D. C., will give the class valedictory, and J. L. Dilorchio, Lynnhaven, will give the salutatory.

Saturday, June 6 has been designated as alumni day. Reunions of 12 classes will be held during the morning. The annual convention of the alumni association will be held in the afternoon after the alumni luncheon. A banquet will be held that evening.

TOWN WILL NAME NEW COUNCILMEN FROM WIDE LIST

Ten Applicants Seek Three Offices Vacant in Ballotting on Tuesday.

LARGE VOTE EXPECTED

Curling to Support Darden in House Race.

Tuesday, between the hours of sunrise and sunset, the registered voters of Virginia Beach will cast their votes for nominees to fill the three vacancies existing on the Virginia Beach Town Council. Because of the wide field of candidates, ten men are in the running, a close contest is anticipated.

Those seeking popular support are: Russell H. Land, E. E. Chapman, H. G. Moore, Dr. George H. Meredith, W. B. Rudolph, C. C. Widgeon, Jesse T. Ewell, Roy A. Barnes, A. T. Garrison and C. H. Capps. Messrs. Land and Barnes are campaigning for reelection, seeking a return to offices which they now fill. E. E. Chapman, formerly a member of the Town Council, is the only other aspirant with councilmanic experience.

Taylor Not Running

Robert Taylor, the third councilman whose term is soon to expire, is not a candidate for reelection.

Although there is a large field seeking the offices, interest in the campaign has been at a low ebb until recent days. Lately, a surge of enthusiasm has been noted in the town, and the election is expected to bring out a good sized vote.

It has been pointed out that among the problems which the new council members will face are the need for an adequate sewage disposal system, the expiration of the water contract with the City of Norfolk, adequate police and fire protection for the growing city and other issues of vital importance. Those candidates generally conceded the best chance to win have been stressing their business background and their records while on the council.

4-H CLUBS PLAN BEACH PARTIES

July Meetings Will Be Informal Rallies Held on Neighboring Waters.

Realizing how hard it is to hold regular monthly meetings during the summer vacation period, all of the 4-H clubs in Princess Anne county are planning to hold beach or lawn parties to take the place of the July meetings. At these parties a short business meeting will be conducted to get a report on projects, number members present, and number planning to attend the Cape Henry 4-H camp, July 10-14. The time will be taken up with winner roasts, games and play. Parents and friends are especially invited to attend the parties.

The schedule has been set for the month of June due to the fact that the Cape Henry 4-H Camp, the 4-H State Short Course and the State Farmers' Institute all come in July and is as follows:

Kempville, June 8th, 6:00 p. m., at Chesapeake Beach.

Blackwater, June 9th, 6:00 p. m., at the New Community Center, Blackwater River.

Oceans, June 10th, 6:00 p. m., at State Seashore Park on beach.

Creeds, June 11th, 6:00 p. m., on G. I. Bright's lawn.

Charity, June 15th, 6:00 p. m., at Sand Bridge Beach.

Center, June 24th, 6:00 p. m., at Chesapeake Beach.

Bay Side, June 12th, 6:00 p. m., at Chesapeake Beach.

August meetings to be in form of a county rally of all clubs. The place will be announced later.

WATER FLOWING FREELY THROUGH COUNTY CHANNEL

Floating Marsh Is Removed by Use of Heavy Dynamite Charges.

NEED DREDGING WORK

Campaign on for Additional Funds.

Removal of the floating marsh from Linkhorn Channel, the new cut from Long Creek into Broad Bay, was accomplished this week by a group of workers supervised by Edwin Lindsay, foreman in charge of the channel's construction. Heavy charges of dynamite were used to effect the cleaning project, and a tour of the channel yesterday revealed surprising changes in the picture presented last week.

Although water is flowing freely through the new cut, which is the first link in the proposed boat channel from Lynnhaven Inlet to Linkhorn Bay, where it is hoped to establish a yacht basin for marine visitors to Virginia Beach, the channel must be both deepened and widened before it will be suitable for the use of all boats above the motorboat class. Regular tidal action may be counted upon to accomplish such desired results, it was pointed out, but a measure of dredging is held necessary.

Seek Dredging Funds

Those who have sponsored the project since it beginning are now seeking the necessary funds for such dredging. Several public-spirited citizens, keenly interested in the channel's development, have proffered their assistance, and it is believed that the desired money can be raised within the next few weeks. Both Town and county officials will be asked to contribute.

People throughout the county have expressed considerable interest in the complete dredging program, which is now before the U. S. Army Engineers for approval. Acceptance of the program as outlined, it was pointed out, will be of material benefit not alone to Virginia Beach, which is badly in (Continued on Page Five)

SIGN-UP PERIOD GIVEN EXTENSION

State Director Reports Wide Interest in Program by Local Farmers.

John R. Hutcheson, director of agricultural extension work in Virginia, announced yesterday that due to requests from farmers and county agents in many sections of the state, the period for signing work sheets for participation in the 1936 soil conservation program will be extended one week.

"Reports received in the state office," says the director, "indicate that more work sheets have been signed this week than in any two weeks since the sign-up campaign began, and that many farmers will not have an opportunity to sign the work sheets if the sign-up period ends May 30. Therefore the sign-up period has been extended through June 6."

40,000 Sign in State

Mr. Hutcheson has just returned from an extensive trip through the northeastern and central states and reports general interest in the soil conservation program in every state which he visited. More than 80,000 farmers in Kentucky, nearly 50,000 in Tennessee, and approximately 40,000 in Virginia, have signed work sheets to date. This is a higher percentage than in most of the northeastern states, but not as high as in the south and the middle west.

Representatives of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration who have visited the southern states report that due to unfavorable weather conditions and a high percentage of cooperation in the soil conservation program by southern farmers, the (Continued on Page Eight)

Records Are Broken For Season's Opening At Hotels and Clubs

To Address T. A. A.

Russell E. Singer, general manager of the American Automobile Association, will be the principal speaker at the 23rd annual meeting of the Tidewater Automobile Association to be held in the Blair Junior High School, Norfolk, next Tuesday at 8 p. m. J. B. Dey, chairman of the meeting, stated that he expects a large attendance especially since the Travelogue Movie of Virginia, prepared by the AAA and the State Commission on Conservation and Development, is to be shown to the members and friends. This is the last opportunity local people will have to see the travelogue.

3 NIGHT CLUBS OPEN NEXT WEEK

French Casino, Frolics and Village Barn Added to Nightly Entertainment.

Three centers of night life, all under new management and extensively renovated and redecorated, will open in Virginia Beach next Saturday, June 13, according to official announcements made this week. The French Casino, the Frolics and the Village Barn will supplement the recreation facilities already provided by those clubs and casinos which opened last weekend, to mark the beginning of what is regarded as the Beach's most successful season.

Tunstall Directs French Casino

Up at the site of the old Embassy, north of the Cavalier Hotel on the ocean front, the French Casino will open under the management of Doug Tunstall. Extensive improvements have been made to the dance floor, a terrace band stand has been installed and a decorative scheme symbolic of the French manner has been employed. Outmost figures of French dancers in characteristic poses and shadow boxes of Parisian scenes, all brought into sharp relief by indirect lighting, line the walls of the central room, with chandeliers of similar style completing the treatment.

This club, which is being billed as one of the most novel and interesting on the Beach, will utilize the services of Bill Allbrook and his orchestra, last year stationed at the Crystal Club, Jimmy White (Continued on Page Five)

Methodists to Begin On Summer Schedule

The Methodist Church of Virginia Beach will begin its summer schedule on Sunday with morning worship at 11 and evening worship at 8 o'clock. Sunday School will be convened each Sunday morning at 9:45.

An assistant will be engaged, as in previous years, to assist the regular minister, the Rev. B. B. Bland, in the conduct of the services.

Mr. Bland left Saturday afternoon for Keysville, Va., to visit his brother, the Rev. L. P. Bland. While there, he will assist in the conduct of an evangelistic service planned for the Keysville Methodist Church.

Local Resort Is Jammed With Vacationists Over Memorial Day Weekend.

NOTED ORCHESTRAS ADD SPIRIT TO FESTIVE DAY

Transportation Lines Report Capacity Crowds; Summer Season Anticipated.

Despite weather colder than average for the day, Virginia Beach was opened officially last Saturday by the greatest throng of visitors ever to be present at a local resort opening, carrying attendance records close to that approximated by the usual mid-season holiday crowd in previous years. It was a gala occasion, both for those who joined in the festivities and for those who welcomed the vacation crowds after months of tourist inactivity and preparation for the 1936 season.

The older residents could not recall a larger or more enthusiastic opening crowd, and, though elaborate preparations had been made by hotel and business interests, local facilities were hard-pressed to take care of the unprecedented demands made for service. The larger hotels and hotel-cottages were jammed to capacity over the entire weekend, with members of the hotel staffs working far into the night to prepare rooms not yet opened for those who sought admittance. Overflow of guests from the hotels was absorbed by the smaller cottages that were open.

Clubs Do Big Business

Beach clubs, the casino and nearby night clubs did a land-office business. The newly-constructed Surf Beach Club opened at the Saturday night dance, while a record total of 1200 danced to the music provided at the Cavalier Beach Club. Down at Seaside Park, where the orchestra arrived late, a throng seldom equaled during the mid-summer jammed the ballroom or roamed through the casino. During the day, kiddies by the score enjoyed the play facilities provided by the management.

Music provided for the opening date was better than in previous years. Tai Henry and his Carolinians, with Irene Bordoni as guest star and a full floor show presentation, opened at the Cavalier; Emerson Gill and his orchestra, here from a long engagement at the Lotus Gardens in Cleveland, provided the music for the Surf Beach Club; Paul Tremaine and his band were at Seaside Park, and Billy Silers and his Club "500" orchestra took over the Club "500" on the Shore Drive.

Steady Stream of Tourists

All Saturday and Sunday morning a steady stream of special buses brought tourists into the Beach from north, south, east and west. Steamship, railroad and bus lines servicing this area reported record-breaking crowds for Memorial Day travelling, and countless thousands of automobiles poured into the resort from all directions. No accidents were reported by the local or county police to mar the festivities of the occasion.

As an instance of the record attendance, the local telephone office reported more than 2,000 calls made Saturday in excess of previous records. The 6,000 calls came within several hundred of tying the resort's all-time mark.

Restaurants Jammed

Local restaurants were taxed to capacity to provide for the hungry tourists, and many hurried orders were sent into Norfolk for increased food supplies as the weekend wore to a close. One omelet hot dog stand, accustomed to closing at sundown for a few hours, closed its doors several hours in advance, sold out of everything edible in its kitchen. (Continued on Page Eight)

THE COUNCILMANIC ELECTION.

On Tuesday, the residents of Virginia Beach will select three councilmen to fill the expired terms now held by Russell H.
Land, Robert F. Taylor and Roy Barnes. Of these, Messrs. Land and Barnes will seek reelection.
Mr. Taylor, completing ten years of service on the Town Council, is not in the running. Eight additional aspirants will compete with the former two for the three positions.

Without any thought of advising our readers as to how they should vote, we would take this opportunity to point out that Virginia Beach stands on the threshold of a period of unprecedented development which, if it is to be made reality, demands the proper type of responsible citizen at the helm. The requirements of the office are more than those of the usual small town, for upon the decisions of the council rest the fate, not alone of our permanent residents, but to considerable extent of our tourist and vacation-ist traffic as well.

A program of wise guidance, of tolerance and of far-sighted planning is the need of the hour, and though we have little difficulty in finding some three or four men so equipped among the ten in the running, we are frank to confess that the election of some five of the candidates cannot be considered as a move in the best interests of the Town. As small-town councilmen they might serve reasonably well; as directors of a responsible community which must prepare for a seasonal influx of many thousands, make the laws which will govern them while here and plan for their entertainment, they are not to be considered. We say this with no lack of personal respect, judging them they could and would bring to the desired positions.

As we see it, men of two types are needed, those who have demonstrated their ability while on the council to assist intelligently in the solution of Town problems and those of wide business experience. Merely being a long-time resident of this community is no criterion of ability or a solid reason for election; intelligence, honest interest in the development of Virginia Beach and an understanding of basic finances and governmental procedure should be the standards by which all are judged.

The News believes that Russell Land and E. E. Chapman have demonstrated during their terms of office the type of leadership and ability which merit their return to the Council. We would stress the fact that we have no interest in these men other than our own recognition of and belief in their ability, expressing the further thought that their presence on the Council is desirable from the point of past experience and performance. Reliable and honest in their decisions, they have demonstrated on many occasions that they are willing to confront the cause of local improvement against the onslaught of privilege and faction.

Referring to the others who seek the office, we would assert that those of widest business experience are the most desirable.

Being interested in the growth of this community from a personal standpoint, those who can be regarded as foremost citizens are certain to base their decisions upon a measure of general good and well-being of the community.
Consideration of them from this sensible point of view will soon bring into bold relief that man or those men who are best equipped.

The value of the Town Council as the central factor in wise community planning must not be endangered by the election of those who can contribute nothing to its deliberations. Bearing such a thought in mind at the time the ballots are cast, the worthy citizen can do no less than assure the election of those three men best equipped to carry on the duties of the office which they seek.

THE DERELICTS REMAIN

In spite of the official silence which has followed our plea that the abandoned automobiles now rotting on Twenty-first Street be removed as a simple, but necessary step towards community neatness, we again direct a few words to those charged with the government of the Town and particularly, with the order of its thoroughfares.

Taxpaying residents living on the street of the derelicts have made their protest, other citizens interested in a neat and orderly community have joined them in urging that authority be found to remove the unsightly wreckage, but no word indicating any action on the part of the Town has been forthcoming. Indeed, whenever the matter has been broached to the Town officials, we have received nothing but a knowing smile—which, to us, could indicate no more than a lack of desire to accede to the people in this simple request.

Now, we assert, the time has come for definite action. We place the removal of the abandoned cars squarely in the hands of those charged with local government.
In this instance Mayor Roy Smith and Don Calcott, Town Engineer.
What, gentlemen, we ask, is to be your decision and action in this matter? Will the wrecks be removed by your order, or must those interested in their removal take the only obvious course and believe—may, know—that you either are not concerned with the wishes of your constituents or that you choose to disregard a duty, as we see it, which is yours?

There can be no quibbling about authority for trash and refuse of a kindred sort are removed daily from the Town's streets. Remove these derelicts, gentlemen, and win the approval of the townspeople and visitors—or suffer the charge of unconcern which is certain to follow.

PUBLIC STREETS AS BATHHOUSES

While we do not regard Virginia Beach as essentially a community of and for the elite, we most definitely cannot hold with those who would transform this resort into a typical Coney Island by using the public streets as bath-houses and picnic grounds. We have been amazed—not to mention disgusted—during recent weeks to see an increasingly large number of automobiles, mostly from adjacent cities and counties, drive up to the curb, pull down their window shades in the car, hang a skirt or sweater over their windows and proceed, in such a state of questionable privacy, to disrobe for a session on the beach. Other cars have been veritable lunch counters, from which soiled paper plates and cups, napkins, boxes, bars and the like have been thrown in complete abandon and without regard for the appearance of the streets so littered.

The first instance, we hold, if no other ordinance can be found to check the practice, can readily be booked as indecent exposure, while the careless picnickers may easily be billed for a charge of wantonly and needlessly littering the streets with trash and refuse.
Should no ordinances be on the local statute books to curb such nuisances, the deficiency is one easily remedied.

We have no quarrel with bathers or picnickers who will take themselves away from the central town for their disrobing and eating, but we do object to the practices which now are becoming so prevalent. Ample bathroom and dining facilities are to be found everywhere for those who would them and aside from the central matter of removing the last vestige of dignity from the Town, the continuance of such tactics comes as a blow to licensed merchants who pay for the privileges which these people appropriate as their own whenever and wherever they choose.

We would urge the Town Council to consider this question.
Should suitable rulings be on the statute books to take care of the situation, we would suggest that the police be requested to act when such efforts to public decency are encountered. Should no authority be vested in the policemen, we would ask that the Council provide such without further delay.

ON THE FRENCH RIVIERA

The slopes have died of blossoming
A hundred times and more Since dream-and-wavel-dazed Odysseus
Wandered this shore.
The punctual cypress can have sought the sun
Through seed and faultless spire
A hundred times since one has watched beside A Roman fire.

A thousand years' ago these low Alps knew
The dark moods of the Moor.
Of crescent, empire or of Ithaca
Who can be sure?

There have survived these low Alps
And the sky.
Mistral and ocean swell,
And this delicately blossoming field.

THE SLIDE

When ice was right for sliding.
Like ball-room floors for lustre.
All boys and girls went gliding
In line as dancers muster.
Or fell and laughed in cluster—
But fall who might, a shape sailed on.

Stately and straight and debonair.
Who added glory to the sun;
Who, hoar-frost on her Auburn hair,
Epitomized all mystery
Of echoing light and silvered tree.

That outward and returning Pursuit was never-ending—Delight of speed and yearning Like wind and warmth contending
And delicately blending.
It was a bright and spinning world
A feather might have stopped and broken.

As on in sunniness you swirled,
Your hair untouched, my love unspoken—
The winds which eddied from your dress

Were nigh too much of loveliness.
The time of Time is real
That settles on your tresses;
Yet still a shape ideal

You glide, and thought still blesses
With all-but-given caresses;
And love has sealed in amber light
Immortally your virgin motif;
The pencilled boughs are candle-white.

Breath-spools hang in dumb devotion;
And chastest ice and reddening sun

And your impeccable robe are one.

AFTER ALL

The nicest people are discreet, Their eyes are dropped, their voices fall.

The rain goes mocking down the street
And dances on the nearest wall.

The nicest people do not shout Nor run nor riot through the day.

But when the childish wind gets out
She blows propriety away.

The wind makes sport of bishops' cloaks.
The rain will drip upon a crown
And all the high and mighty folks Go running home when rain comes down.

But plovers whistling in a field
And salmon upon the sea Laugh at the wind and do not yield.

Their balance or their dignity.

At The Water's Edge

AN OPENING TO BE REMEMBERED

The possibilities for early season activity at Virginia Beach brought to light in such striking manner by the capacity crowds of last weekend can, we believe, be made reality in future years by the adoption of an all-year-round promotion program which will swing into its seasonal stride not later than February or mid-March. Granted a satisfactory break in weather conditions and a continuance of present progressive building enterprise, there is every reason to believe that the constantly increasing midsummer patronage accorded the Beach will develop without interruption, and it is, therefore, to the ends of our normally short season that we must give the bulk of our attention.

It is true that the greatest volume of vacation trade moves over the country during the summer months. It is equally true, however, that each month in the year finds hundreds of thousands of persons on the highways and transportation lines of the nation, most of them seeking a place of relaxation, rest and recreation.
facilities which abound here in generous fashion during all save one or two months. How to attract a fair percentage of this non-summer traffic to Virginia Beach is a problem deserving of sound investigation and proper experiment.

Promotion of the Ocean Highway as the most attractive route to and from Florida has been most beneficial during the past year, and hotels which have remained open during the winter felt the salutary effects of that promotion. As the traveling public becomes more familiar with the advantages of that north-south route, a greater demand for accommodations here is certain to result.

But we would not propose Virginia Beach merely as a stopping off point for the through tourist.
Those of us familiar with this territory during the fall recognize that the months of September and October and, frequently, November are the finest of the entire year. Indian summer continues here long beyond the normal period, and there is no facility for rest or relaxation existing here during the summer season that is not found in equal force during those months. Indeed, with the excessive heat and glare of the summer gone, many of these facilities take on an added charm and restfulness that must appeal to the experienced vacationist and traveler.

The number of those who shun the summer as the proper vacation time is legion. Not all enjoy the hectic, hilarious and breathtaking speed of the summer season and its devotees, and many of this group deliberately select the autumn months as the proper time for their annual period of relaxation and rest. Virginia Beach, though properly situated to attract a volume of this business, has been inclined to overlook it, with the very natural consequence that little of it has been apparent here.

Bear in mind that the northcar resorts, during this fall season, are closing because of unfavorable weather conditions. Remember, too, that the Florida resorts are not in full swing. Attention centers, therefore, upon the midwest and the midwest, and it is into these sections that a night volume of tourist travel is directed. It is the season when Hot Springs, White Sulphur Springs, Pinehurst, Aiken and other resort communities in our immediate vicinity are most active yet it is also a time when Virginia Beach humbers and sleeps, quite possibly worn out by the rigors of the summer that has gone.

What is true of the fall is true, also, to a modified extent, of the early spring. Bathing is out of the question for all but the hard-iest, but the charm of spring is not confined to the water's edge or to the surf which rolls in on the shore. The golf courses are at their best at this season, riding trails open universal visits in the preening forests and it is a time when walking on beach and in the adjacent historic Cape Henry country becomes a pleasant, restful way of spending many swift-passing hours.

It is facts like these, we maintain, which should be presented to the spring and fall tourist.
The change in emphasis of the adver-tisings must be made, for though the seasons have much in common, each has its own peculiar highlights which appeal to specific types of individuals. Development of such a program is certain to result in a season of increased size, with a constantly widening influx of visitors during those months when local business languishes because of a lack of patronage.

Reports from a wide front concerning the attendance figures for the past weekend indicate that all records of the past have been broken. Hotels and cottages which normally could expect no more than a mere handful of guests reported capacity houses, with many prospective visitors turned away because of a lack of accommodations. What is more important in this early season survey is the fact that more money was spent here per individual over that weekend than in recent years, bringing concrete evidence that the depression in finances is drawing to a close, if it is not yet over, and that the day of the real vacation trip, with its ready spending of funds, looms brightly upon the horizon.

Beach clubs, the casino and night clubs in the outlying territory report capacity houses, far beyond even the wildest hopes of the several managements. It was a gala weekend at the new Surf Beach Club, and the thousand or more persons who attended its dances or utilized its bathing and dining facilities expressed relief at the thoroughness of the plans made for the opening and at the completeness of the club's facilities. Those who doubted its reception no longer need fear for its success. A welcome addition to Beach life, the Surf Beach Club fills a definite need in the facilities of this community.

Although it is a commonplace to report that the Cavalier Beach Club opened to a large and enthusiastic crowd, it is news to learn that the attendance for the weekend surpassed by many hundreds any that previously had attended an opening. The chill breezes that swept across the dancing floor dimmed not one bit the spirits of the visitors, and Saturday was a night that will not be forgotten. What was true here was equally true at the Seaside Park and at the Club "500" on the Shore Drive, which also opened officially for the season over the weekend.

Chris Schneider, who makes a point of his ability to anticipate crowds and their appetites, guessed wrong on this occasion, for his large store of hamburgers and hot dogs dwindled to nothing during the early hours of Sunday, and he was forced to close his doors several hours before the usual time, sold out of every edible item in the house. Other restaurants and eating places approached closely to a similar situation.

Another interesting item of capacity attendance comes from the local telephone company, which surpassed all former early season records by more than 2,000 calls. The lead carried on Saturday, according to a reliable count, approached within a few hundred calls of the all-time record of the local office.

So did an opening date that will be long remembered come and go. It was refreshing in its capacity, hopeful in the indications which it brings for subsequent patronage this summer and still another certain proof that the statement of Virginia Beach as the ideal summer resort on the Atlantic coast is far from an idle boast or publicity man's pipe dream. The resort is going places—it has long since left the status of a vacationing spot designed solely for local patronage, and the record established here in recent days is no more than a goal to be surpassed with the opening of each subsequent season.

Cooperation of all business and hotel agencies operating here with the local Chamber of Commerce in its attempt to make eastern and midwestern United States travelers and business conscious is certain to assure the desired results.
The Beach has left the position where individual striving for recognition is necessary or desirable, and the progress of the future will rest to great extent upon the manner and matter of cooperation extended to the community's approved "voice" by those whose services and facilities make the Beach such an ideal vacation land.

As Others See It

HOLT'S CANDIDACY

The Suffolk News-Herald calls attention to the fact that Lieutenant-Governor James H. Price, of Richmond, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, and State Senator Saxon W. Holt, of Newport News, candidate for the nomination for Lieutenant-Governor, hail from the same general section of the State and surmises that this might affect the Price candidacy adversely in the event any strong opposition to the Lieutenant-Governor should develop before the 1937 primary election. Says the News-Herald:

"A little more than a hundred miles west of Newport News is Richmond. Living in that city is one James H. Price, now gracing the office of Lieutenant-Governor.
He has an ambition to step up higher. But everybody knows if Saxon Holt, coming almost from the same geographical position, remains in the race, either he or the Richmond gentleman is going to stay at home. Politicians know how to fight fire with fire, and if Suffolk backers of Jim Price want him defeated for nomination for Governor, they need only to support Holt for second place.
Virginia Hillbillies will never vote for two men from Tidewater for the major State offices. Tidewater can't have its cake and eat it too."

Whether or not our Suffolk contemporary is right in ascribing the Holt candidacy to the fact that certain interests "would like to eliminate" Price this newspaper does not know. The same argument, of course, would apply to the potential candidacy of State Senator Robert D. Daniel, of "Brandon," a short distance below
Richmond on the James River, who is quoted as having said that he might seek the nomination for Lieutenant-Governor. Moreover, if either of two Tidewater candidates had to be sacrificed, we sternly suspect that Mr. Price would not be the losing candidate.

The policy of nominating candidates for the two highest State offices from different sections is in accordance with the best political traditions and doubtless is a very wise policy whiff. There are able men in every section of the State and as far as possible the whole State should be represented in government. If it is indeed true, as the News-Herald suspects, that the Holt bid is a clever move to switch Price votes by later bringing out a candidate for Governor from the Western section of the State and thus providing a balanced ticket with a Western candidate for Governor, Price supporters can easily counter this move by choosing a running mate for him either from the Valley or from Southwest Virginia—Northern Virginia Daily.

AND THEY SAY THERE'S ROMANCE IN THE NEWSPAPER BUSINESS

About a year ago we received a letter from a woman subscriber who told us how much she liked the paper, especially the editorials.
In her effusiveness she even went so far as to compare the editor with Sherwood Anderson, which certainly was no compliment to the writing ability of Mr. Anderson.

The other day she refused to renew her subscription because she didn't approve of an editorial we wrote about the Hauptmann case. That was her only objection to the paper in the year and one-half that it has been under the present owners.

Of course we felt that she was unfair. So we got out our pencil and paper and started figuring.
For seventy-eight weeks, with an average of four editorials a week there had appeared in this newspaper 312 editorials.

Something that appeared in ONE of the 312 editorials offended our reader. So she refused to renew her subscription for that reason.

Which leads to to wonder if we wouldn't get a little more satisfaction out of life by operating a hot dog stand—or perhaps going into the real estate business.—Park Ridge (N. J.) Local.

HEREDITARY INFLUENCE?

A great many words have been written this spring concerning the development of the automobile trailer industry. Manufacturers of complete homes on wheels have found themselves considerably behind in the fulfillment of orders, it is reported, and the purchase of these adjuncts to automotive travel is said to be moving ahead faster than the manufacture of automobiles themselves.

Some writers have estimated that within twenty-five years, fully half of the population of the country will be living in homes which can be towed from the Atlantic to the Pacific via the family automobile. If this is true, of the early pioneer will show them—other chapter in terrific changes in the makeup of the social fabric in America.

Just what character of complexion a motorized family would ultimately develop is difficult to foresee. Certainly, half of the children in the country being placed in a universe of perpetual motion from one point to another, would require a new technique in education. The disappearance of the fixed abode which has become tradition in the world would undoubtedly alter the entire manner of life for society.

This trend, partially set in motion by the depression with its numerous business failures and evictions, may go deeper in its beginnings than 1929. Perhaps it is a return of our frontier heritage when men continually pushed westward to find "elbow room."
If the business of living in trailers goes as far as some students of the problem seem to think, it is not unreasonable to suppose that a whole new industry may be created. But of the people who become nomads, one can only wonder how many of the characteristics of the early pioneer will show themselves in the new way of life.

Whether it is a return to heritage or simply a restlessness induced by the instability of the machine age, one cannot say as yet. But the phenomenon, as a sociological study, is interesting.

MIGRATION HELD CAUSE OF SMALL STUDENT GAINS

Scant Increase in School Population in State Laid to Annual Egress.

Continued migration of Virginians to other states is advanced by the Virginia State Planning Board as one reason why the 1935 school census shows only small school population increases. In a study of the new census figures just completed. The board finds that a gross gain of only 6,966 children of school age was recorded during the five years for the entire state, while Virginia should have been entitled to a gain of about 36,000, according to the rate of natural increase. While the natural rate of gain may have been somewhat smaller than is considered standard for an estimate, the board believes that the drop is too large to be accounted for in any other way than by migration.

Some idea of how migrations are effecting Virginia's population may be obtained from a comparison made by the board of the school census figures of 1930, as compared with 1925. In 1925, a total increase of 40,025 white school children over the census of 1925 was recorded in the Virginia counties, compared with a gain of but 10,318 from 1930 to 1935. In 1930 the census showed 11,412 more negro school children in the counties than in 1925, but the 1935 census showed an actual decline of 7,375 negro school children from the record of 1930.

Migration Is Old Story
 In the cities the 1930 increase in white school children was 20,366 over the 1925 figures. The 1935 census showed only 186 more white school children in all of the cities combined than was reported five years earlier. The negro school increase of 1930 over 1925 was 6,571, as compared with 3,767 in 1935, over 1930. The total school population increase from 1925 to 1930 was 78,374, as compared with 6,966 increase from 1930 to 1935, or about one eleventh of the 1930 increase in 1935.

The migration of Virginians to other states has been going on for years, the State board reports. In 1930 there were as many more Virginians living in other states than those from other states that were living in Virginia, that they equalled the combined populations of Richmond, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Petersburg and Newport News. A study made by the board shows that there are more Virginians living in every state in the Union than there are of their citizens living in Virginia, with the exceptions of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Wisconsin, the Carolinas, Georgia, and Alabama. North Carolinians living in Virginia number 121,873, or 65,222 more than the number of Virginians living in North Carolina.

The Virginia colony in California numbers 17,320, as compared with 1,044 Californians living in the Old Dominion. There are 108,203 Virginians living in Pennsylvania, 110,000 in West Virginia, 72,411 in New York, 65,162 in Maryland and 72,094 in the District of Columbia. There are 330,611 from other states living in Virginia and 834,442 Virginians living elsewhere.

BOOKS TO OWN

WHO OWNS AMERICA?
 Edited by Herbert Agar and Allen Tate

Houghton. Mifflin. 342 pp. $3.00
 A Review by Warner Moss, Acting Assistant Professor of Political Science, University of Virginia.

When twelve Southerners issued an agrarian manifesto six years ago, giving it the title, "I'll Take My Stand," it was received with a mixture of surprise, delight and indignation. Northeastern industrialism had dominated the country so long and so completely that even the stock market crash had failed to shake us loose from the notion of a manifest destiny of urban and industrial civilization.

Most of this small group of Southern writers now reappear, but this time with the aid of men from other sections of the country and men with diverse economic interests. "Who Owns America?" a symposium edited by Herbert Agar and Allen Tate, is a "new Declaration of Independence" proposing that we destroy monopoly capitalism and replace it with the Property State, a democracy based upon small property ownership. The proposal would be carried out by government purchase of land and its resale to men who wish to establish small farms. The powers of taxation and regulation would be used to curb large corporate enterprise and compel the decentralization of industry in units small enough to permit extensive individual ownership. The authors also propose tax discrimination to the advantage of the farmer, since they recognize that their proposal of subsistence farming coupled with small money crops would not permit the farmer to bear the cost of keeping up the schools, the roads, and other social services.

Mr. Agar roundly denies that the new declaration of independence is a back to the land movement. If it be so, Mr. Agar keeps strange company. The principal bond of unity among the twenty authors of the symposium is an admiration for a way of life which they believe existed in the past.

Several of the twenty authors carry their ideas rather far, but, on the whole, the book is reformist in character. Much of the program will be enacted in a compromise form; parts of it have been included in the New Deal. In the present political line-up, the agrarian West and South are allied against the urban and industrial elements of the Northeast. The New Deal is taking money from the cities to the farms. Rural Recettlement is establishing small farms. The Administration seems committed to the destruction of the grosser forms of overgrown corporate enterprise. Industry seems to be engaged in decentralization. The Tennessee Valley Authority carries out many of these ideas and represents a long step towards regionalism. The program of "Who Owns America?" seems to have possibilities.

Yet, we are reminded of the agrarian democracy of Jefferson and Jackson. We are reminded of the business democracy and trust-busting of Roosevelt and Wilson. These movements developed great force as insurgent rebellions, but they never seemed to develop constructive programs. Each in turn fell before the onslaughts of large capitalism, for if property is to mean profits then small profits must inevitably give way to the cumulative power of large profits. If small enterprise is to live, government must be its guardian; but we are familiar with the way in which even democratic governments have bowed to the will of Big Business and become its tool in the destruction of small enterprise. Mr. Agar realistically recognizes that his proposals may not work, and, though he earnestly hopes for a liberty-loving and democratic America, he considers the alternatives. He says, "If the American people cannot have genuine property, genuine competition, they will prefer a State planned by the Communists for the good of the whole rather than a State planned by the robber barons for the good of one another." Fascism he completely condemns, saying, "... if once we get Fascism, we shall probably get Communism in the end, for the reason that Fascism is too bad to be endured."

The real significance of "Who Owns America?" is found in its set of values. Most of the criticism of our present society has come from the cities where personal insecurity is great, and hence that criticism tends to emphasize security at the expense of liberty. An agrarian view in our literature of discontent is therefore wholesome. It is also wholesome that some should point out

Ordination Service Held at Lynnhaven

At a special ordination service held at the Lynnhaven Presbyterian Church last Sunday, Clarence F. Marshall was ordained and installed as elder of the church and his son, Samuel Marshall, was ordained and installed as deacon by the Rev. Thomas D. Wesley. The service ordaining father and son was reported as a particularly impressive one.

The Rev. Samuel Harness, of Rose Hill, N. C., made the charge to the candidates and to the congregation.

at this time that civilization is not measured in the products of mass production alone. A little liberty may be worth its cost in material advantages.

The Blue Ridge is the setting for Hubert Skidmore's "I Will Lift Up Mine Eyes," a novel of a family of ridge-runners which received the Avery and Jule Hopwood Awards for creative writing—awards new to us. In this book of the backwoods, as in so many about the towns, the changing way of civilization reflects itself. Drought affects the mountain farm with its one cow and worn-out patch of land. So the father of the family finds work in a lumber mill. The mother wishes to bring up her children in the hills, but the family must follow the breadwinner. The mill breaks the father, and the town ineradicably marks the children before the mountain woman returns home. She has accomplished her choice, but, we feel, only for a time. Sooner or later the mill and what it stands for must win out.

The history of "The Floating Republic" by G. E. Manwaring and Bonamy Dobree, an account of the mutinies in the British Navy at Spithead and the Nore in 1797, is much more exciting, and just as valuable in a limited way. If you wish an old-fashioned historical romance for diversion, don't miss Honore W. Morrow's "Let the King Beware!" It's about a lovely female blue-socking, George III, and a young gentleman from the Colonies, which, at the time, were becoming a trifle irritated with George.

BAYNE THEATRE PREVUES

Warner Baxter has the most impressive and powerful role of his screen career as the ruthless bandit-hero of M-G-M's spectacular new outdoor drama of the West, "Robin Hood of El Dorado", on view today and tomorrow, June 5 and 6, at the Bayne Theatre. In support of Baxter is Margo, the Spanish dancing beauty, Ann Loring, Bruce Cabot, Eric Linden and others.

Columbia's new Frank Capra picture "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" will be shown Sunday and Monday, June 7 and 8. Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur have the featured roles. The story concerns Longfellow Deeds, a rustic young man who suddenly falls heir to $200,000 and goes to New York City against his will to claim his money.

A double feature is scheduled for Tuesday, June 9—Clarence E. Mulford's "Three on the Trail" with William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison and Onslow Stevens in the leading roles; and "Moonlight Murder" featuring Chester Morris and Madge Evans. "Three on the Trail" shows, in gripping detail, the early settling of the West, and the range warfare that raged between the forces of law and order and the overwhelming hordes of "bad men" who infested the territory. "Moonlight Murder" is a mystery romance dealing with the slaying of a tenor before an audience of twenty thousand at the Hollywood Bowl.

An unscrupulous financier trapped on a lonely ranch by two desperados... a husband seeking to avenge a wife who has been misled... a politician willing to pay any price to cover up his cowardice... these are a few of the dramatic scenes of "Absolute Quiet," coming Wednesday and Thursday, June 10 and 11, to the Bayne Theatre. Members of the cast include Irene Hervey, Lionel Atwell, Stuart Erwin, Ann Loring, Raymond Walburn and Louis Hayward.

Glorifying Leftover Ham

Ham Pie with Biscuit Crust

DELICIOUS has dinner need of meat, grind them for soups, sandwich fillings or omelets, or cut them fine for salads, casserole dishes or creamed mixtures. By tucking them carefully between layers of macaroni, bread crumbs or noodles, or mixing them into sauce to be heated over a double boiler, you have eliminated any chance of over cooking or drying out the meat.

Mrs. Luther Sheldon left Monday for Chautauqua, New York, where she will spend the summer. Rev. and Mrs. L. W. Meachum and family, of Virginia Beach, will occupy Mrs. Sheldon's home during her absence.

Mix 3 cups of chopped left-over ham with 3 cups of rich white sauce, 1 cup fresh cooked peas and 1/2 green pepper chopped. Season well with pepper and a little salt and place in a buttered baking dish. Make a rich biscuit dough by sifting 3 cups flour with 4 teaspoons baking powder and 1/2 teaspoon salt, cutting in 4 tablespoons lard and then adding 1/2 cup milk to make a soft dough. Put out on a floured board and cut in squares or circles. Place close together over the ham mixture. Sprinkle with paprika and bake for 30 minutes in a 400° F. oven.

Miscellaneous Hints

FLOWERS: Most flowers should have little or no artificial watering until they are at least half grown.

When watering is begun, lay the hose on the ground and soak the soil between the rows. Sprinkling requires the use of more water and is less thorough.

To get better and larger blooms, cease watering when buds appear.

For a continuation of bloom, pick flowers regularly. This is most important with sweet peas and anemones, less so with petunias.

VEGETABLES: Avoid the common mistake of Americans of letting vegetables grow too large before picking. Younger vegetables are more tender, more nourishing and more palatable.

With a large percentage of the vegetables, get them while they are yet in the full flush of growth. Root crops—radish, carrot, beet—are at their best when barely half grown.

Pick peas just before pods fill out completely. Pick corn just at the "milk" stage, that is, when the kernel, gouged with the finger nail, yields a milky juice. Use Summer squash when small, just after the bloom has dropped off.

Other vegetables, of course, should be allowed to mature more completely before using. Tomatoes should be ripened well on the vine, as should Winter squash. Cauliflower are at their best when they need not be pulled from the stem, but roll off the vine at a touch.

There are exceptions to many of these rules of course. Some may wish to use green tomatoes for special dishes or for canning, or they may wish to allow beans to grow to the dry bean stage.

EXPRESS SERVICE BEGUN TO BEACH

Norfolk Southern Inaugurates New Fast Schedule for Buses.

Wednesday, June 3, the Norfolk-Southern Railroad inaugurated its first express-train service from Virginia Beach and the section between Virginia Beach and Cape Henry to Norfolk in the morning with an express train back to the Beach in the evening. This service will be given by the new streamlined railbuses, the morning railbus leaving Cape Henry at 7:47 and leaving Virginia Beach at 8:00. Arriving at Park Avenue at 8:32, passengers will be transported immediately to the Union Bus Terminal in the center of the City. Business men and returning shoppers will be able to leave the Union Bus Terminal at 5:20 P. M. and go through to the Beach from the center of the City in forty minutes. This train will continue on up to Cape Henry, serving that section.

In establishing this service, the railroad people believe it will meet the wishes of a great many daily commuters and business men who would prefer the comfort of this modern equipment. The service to and from the center of the city in the morning and evening will be tried out this summer and the public's reception will show whether it is really warranted. Local stops will only be made at Oceana, Lynnhaven, Glenrock and Ingleside and it is expected that this run of 32 minutes to Norfolk will prove the most attractive transportation yet offered to the public in this section. Commutation tickets will be good on these trains and bus tickets will be accepted.

These trains, also, in addition to providing a service to the center of the city in Norfolk, will continue into Union Station for connection with the Norfolk and Western from the north and west. It is also thought that the extension of this service between Cape Henry and Virginia Beach will be of great help to that largely growing section and that the lower rates of commutation will extend to the public a large saving on the cost of operating their private automobiles and save the worries of parking, highway dangers, and the wear and tear on the family car.

3 NIGHT CLUBS OPEN NEXT WEEK

Black and Tan Revue
Down Atlantic Boulevard, just north the Seaside Park, the Prolics Club will open its doors next Saturday with a black and tan floor presentation. Clint Turner, billed as the Cab Callo-way of the South, will furnish the music, and a floor show similar to that staged at Connie's Inn, in New York, will be presented by Showboy Holland, who will act as master of ceremonies.

P. L. Woodward, who is directing the Prolics Club, stated yesterday that this is the first time such a presentation has been offered to the guests of the Beach community. Another innovation to be found there is an elevated dance floor, first of its type on the Beach. The decorative scheme is finished in red and yellow, with caricatures lining the walls.

Village Barn to Open
On the site of the New Casino and the former Club Tallyho, the Village Barn and Playland are being rushed to completion. The old bath house property has been transformed into a modern casino, with restaurant, locker rooms and many types of games newly constructed. The night club has been modeled closely upon the design of the Village Barn in New York, and will offer all of the features of the parent club. Joseph E. Rose is manager of the new casino venture and is expected to present, as his opening orchestral attraction, the California Nightwings, direct from Hollywood. A full floor show also will be brought down from northern night clubs for the entertainment of the patrons.

COMPLETION OF BATTLEFIELD PARK SYSTEM TO BE CELEBRATED JULY 21

The completion of Virginia's chain of major Civil War Battlefield Parks will be celebrated at Manassas, Virginia, on July 21—the seventy-fifth anniversary of the first Battle of Manassas or Bull Run. The anniversary and the beginning of the development of the battlefields of First and Second Manassas as a National Battlefield Park will be the subject for a national demonstration, including a restaging of the battle of July 21, 1861, with United States Army and Marine units participating, as well as guardsmen. The spectacular battle will be restaged through the cooperation of a local committee and the state and federal governments. National Park Service officials will have a large part in the celebration.

Work Now Complete
Within Virginia for more than a score of years there has been agitation for the preservation of the major battlefields of the War Between the States. Public spirited citizens of the Old Dominion purchased the land upon which the battles of Cold Harbor, Mechanicsville, and Richmond took place and established the Richmond Battlefield Park, which has been presented to the nation. The scene of the major siege operations of the War Between the States has been acquired about Petersburg, and National Park Service units are rapidly developing it into a major park. For many years the work of building a Battlefield Park to include the battlefields of Chancellorsville, Fredericksburg, Spotsylvania, Courthouse, and the Wilderness has been in progress. This area is now the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania County Battlefield Park, a federal property. Recently the War Department turned its holdings at Appomattox, the scene of the surrender, over to the Park Service and a major appropriation has been made for the completion of the proposed memorial there. With the development of Manassas battlefields, locally the first in the chain of operations, a historical tour of world uniqueness is made possible.

Those who are accustomed to the later rank of well-known officers of the War Between the States will find it strange to see J. E. B. Stuart, Jubal A. Early, Ambrose E. Burnside and William Sherman portrayed simply as colonels in the reenactment of the first battle of Manassas. It modern United States Army in the defense of the Henry House Hill, where the first "stone wall" won his nom de guerre.

Preparations for the spectacle are going forward under the supervision of the historians of the National Park Service and with the aid of qualified army and naval officials. Every state that had troops at Manassas during the first battle will be extended the privilege of having them again on the field of action. Lists of all companies and officers of these companies will be prepared and used by the celebration officials.

Already Conservation Corps units have done much to improve the battlefields, which are said to be in a splendid state of preservation. Visitors will see a national park in the making, as well as a spectacle.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Don't Forget to Turn the Key or Else—?

It is a rare occurrence when a double exposure does not spoil two good pictures and waste film.

THE above picture of a Brodding-nagian young lady mischievously reclining on the surface of the sea amidst a fleet of sailboats reminds us that while modern cameras are indeed close to being robots in their performance, they still demand the cooperation of human intelligence in order to function with the result expected.

The photograph is the curious consequence of a double exposure, illustrating the fact that the film behind your camera lens will not move over for the next picture by the exercise of its own free will. About that it is totally indifferent. You have to perform this operation yourself. If you forget it, and find that you have twice or thrice exposed the same frame of film, you may by chance get a picture as amusing and worth keeping as the one above, but in most cases you will have a meaningless jumble of superimposed shapes and shadows that will interest nobody, not even a Cubist. Result, you have lost two or three pictures that perhaps you can never take again and have wasted film.

Most of us have had this experience. Then why not get the habit of turning the key to the next exposure the very instant after you have taken a picture? If you haven't this habit as yet, and times come, as they always will, when you hesitate because you are not sure whether you turned the key, play safe; give it another turn rather than take the chance of spoiling two pictures.

Of course, you can find plenty of amusement in deliberately making double exposures in order to produce freak photographs. But these need careful planning to be successful. They must be done usually with still subjects and require minute accuracy in the focusing. A tripod is a first necessity. Astonishing pictures may be produced by double exposures deliberately planned, but if you have success in such efforts, let your conscience and the credulity of your friends be your guides when you exhibit them.

PETTY POLITICS TO THE FORE

Virginia Beach, Va.
June 2, 1936
Editor, Virginia Beach News.

Dear Editor:

Your article in last Friday's Virginia Beach News, "Politics Versus Good Government," was certainly a revelation.

After reading that column I feel sure there are a great many disappointed voters in Lynnhaven District who supported Mr. Lawrence because they held him an honest, conscientious man, a man who could not be influenced into doing any thing that was underhanded or unprincipled and above petty politics, although we all know the machine only selects men whom they can control. But when I said Mr. Lawrence was an exception to the rule people laughed at me.

On August 4 of 1935, Mr. Lawrence approached me at the Polls and asked for my support. My reply to him was that I could not because I had promised Mr. Payne. But I told him I felt sure he would be elected as those who were voting for Clerk of the Court were voting down the line as instructed. During the conversation I told Mr. Lawrence that he was going in with a crowd which I felt was very small when it came to politics and I was afraid that he would become contaminated and would not be strong enough to resist their influence.

His answer to me was—"Mr. Blank, when I can not go into a Supervisor's meeting and be honest, conscientious and work for the good of the people I'll resign." My reply to that was—"When you do that Mr. Lawrence, I'll promise you my vote as many times as you are a candidate, but I feel sure you will find you will have to do as you are told or you will be ousted." He then told me he had seen a few things done that day which he did not approve of, referring I think, to those who did not vote until they were embarrassed for their trouble. I let him know that others were not blind to the situation either.

I hold no animosity or hatred for Mr. Lawrence, but I am truly disappointed because I did trust him. I did have confidence in him as a honest citizen, a constant church man, and a professed Christian. How, may I ask, can he feel he is ever one of these when he has harbored such malice, as he had displayed for Mr. Lindsey?

He is certainly not working for the good of his people in this district when he will allow a personal feeling to halt such a splendid work as Mr. Lindsey has rendered the county. It was reported that Mr. Lawrence made a statement in public that either the camp had to go or "Ed Lindsey." But thanks to other influences we have them both as yet. I believe our Supervisor has overestimated his power and importance.

If it were possible to print the names of some of our office holders as small as their actions when it came to politics it would take a powerful magnifying glass for most of us to even read them.

This is not the first black mark opposite Mr. Lawrence's name. Do you remember at the first meeting of the new Board that Mr. Lawrence was the one who made the motion to fire Mr. Lee, the Court House Janitor, who had been previously hired for the ensuing year by the old Board? It is possible there was personal feeling that prompted his action. However I am inclined to believe that he was just obeying his first order. It seems the Jobs don't come too small when the powers in office wish to retaliate or show revenge.

If the thinking people of Princess Anne County would only realize that our county government can not possibly be any better than we make it, and as long as we put such poor, inefficient, incapable, weak men in office, we cannot expect any better results than we are receiving.

Not only in the Board of Supervisors do we find petty politics. Let us just run our fingers down the pages of the minutes of the School Board. First we find that Mr. Marvin Wilbur, trustee from Blackwater, has been removed while the remaining members were retained, and a Mr. Gilbert elected to fill the vacancy.

From what I have learned Mr. Gilbert's wife is principal of the school in his district. My belief is that we can show by law that either he or his wife can be removed. Then down a little further we read that Mrs. Hudgins, the wife of the Clerk of the Court, has been reappointed as teacher at Kempville. I contend there are too many hands in one family that are in the county's pocket-book. Please tell me is there any fairness in any of these acts? Isn't it time that the people of this county who are capable of thinking for themselves and who are head and shoulders above putting a price on their vote to better themselves and try to make our government better in Princess Anne?

I hope that every voter in Lynnhaven District read your article because I feel that half of them do not know just what clandestine and unfair things prevail.

You would do the voters, Mr. Editor, a big favor to reprint "Politics Versus Good Government" as a reminder before our next primary.

Yours for better government.

DATA ON LOCAL FARMS SECURED

equivalent of two or more days, exclusive of housework during the first week of January totaled 339,106, of which 286,796 were family workers and 52,310 hired help. Family workers include the farm operators and members of their families working without wages.

Local Figures Talled
Breaking down the State figures to local county units it is revealed that a total of 1,258 workers reported on Princess Anne farms was composed of 1,220 family laborers and 443 hired hands. A total of 270 operators reporting off the farm work spent 44,963 days in such labor for pay, of which number 246 were employed in nonagricultural pursuits. A total of 999 local farmers reported no off the farm work for pay.

Chickens over three months old, according to another section of the census, on Princess Anne farms totaled 78,765 out of a total 1,153 farms reporting, or 90.3 per cent of all county farms. Eggs produced by 1,113 local farms totaled 343,888 dozens, while, in the previous year, a grand total of 187,903 chickens was raised locally. This was in addition to 3,329 turkeys raised on 206 county farms.

Chickens over three months old on all Virginia farms on January 1, according to the report, totaled 8,541,655 on 175,948 farms. During the previous year the production of chicken eggs was 43,067,459 dozens and the number of chickens raised was 16,517,441. The three leading counties in the number of chickens on hand were Rockingham, Augusta and Shenandoah. Augusta, Fairfax, Shenandoah and Rockingham were the only counties in the State reporting a production in excess of 1,000,000 dozens of eggs. Turkeys over three months of age totaled 173,839 on January 1, and were reported on 28,368 farms, or 14.4 per cent of all the farms in Virginia.

Refusal by the engineers of the Lafayette River project has not served to discourage these county men who have worked diligently and earnestly for approval of the local project. The conditions existing here are different from those of the proposed Norfolk anchorage, they assert, expressing the hope that a favorable report will be forthcoming on the county program.

To date, there has been no indication of any action which the engineers stationed in Norfolk plan to take.

Driftwood Seen and Overheard By Toby

Some thirty-five years ago, the first song dealing with the glories of Virginia Beach made its appearance on the local streets, written by a young lad who resided here, Sidney H. Simmons, by name. The author, now known to many thousands as "Captain" Simmons, one of the familiar faces on the Norfolk-Southern Railroad, discovered the masterpiece—long forgotten and probably the only copy in existence—several weeks ago, a souvenir of early Beach history and an interesting picture of the facilities which then existed here.

With Captain Simmons' permission, we reprint that song, entitled "Souvenir Song on Virginia Beach—Fifty Cents per Copy."

On the eleventh day of May,
From New York I sailed away
To Virginia, with Norfolk on my route;
When that city I did reach
I took in Virginia Beach.
The place I heard them blow so much about.

It's surroundings made me sick.
I felt like buying a gold brick.
I was so queer I thought I'd almost faint;
That when my eyes they fell on The Princess Anne Hotel,
That never got but one poor coat of paint.

The attractions they have there,
They would almost raise your hair;
You ought to see the "Pine Grove" and the "Park."
And the old toboggan slide, that looks so awful snide.
Built sometime in the days of Noah's ark,
And a hum Merry-go-round (God knows where it was found)
And the Ferris wheel would take away your speech;
They have 880 lots, and fishes they call "spots";
These are some of the "attractions" on the Beach!

You can have your fortune told,
If you wish for to be sold.
She can tell you ALL the history of your life!
If you stop out late at night,
Break a bank, or had a fight,
Or run off with some other fellow's wife.
Or, if in business, you will fail, or serve 20 years in jail.
For the dough that's in your pocket she will pinch;
Or, if your girl is false to you, she'll tell you what to do—
She's one of the "attractions" on the Beach!

There's a cane racks there galore,
On this great Virginia shore.
But one of them is on the rack for good.
And a shooting gallery that's run by steam, you see,
But the steam is off and now it's in the mud.
There's a copper who can't be found nowhere on the ground,
And a diving raft, out so far you couldn't reach,
Well, some guy, for a joke, in the raft a hole, did poke,
And sunk it to the bottom of the Beach!

There's a soda water stand that's not far from the band,
To speak the truth, it really is a punk;
It's just the place to go for cream-soda or coco cola—
That's if you wish a cool refreshing drink.
But the business that they do, it makes the boys look blue,
There's not a dollar there within their reach;
Boys, take a friend's advice: Don't hesitate twice,
Dump the barrels of ice water on the Beach!

A dairy lunch was started, their expectation—it was great;
They thought for business they would never lack;
But "lunch baskets" queered the deal, and how sadly now they feel,
The poor Camel has a hump upon his back!
The whole thing was a "frost," and their boodle it is lost,
But a lesson to them really it did teach.
Now they sadly rue the day that they were led astray
To start in business at Virginia Beach!

It would be something rare if they had no "Tin Type" there.
But there's a good fellow who thinks he's awful slick;
Well, on the license day, $20 he had to pay
Before they'd let him open up the trick!
Oh! Jim says: "What a pity I ever left Atlantic City, Away from all my friends out of the track."

But you bet your life, some day that Jim will have his say
And what a roasting he will give Virginia Beach!
At Richardson's resort, that's where the boys have lots of sport,
The bunch do congregate there every night;
At home he makes you feel, with a cool bottle or square meal,
And you'll find he'll always do the things that's right.
There's Duncan and Roscoe, and Weaver there, also.
They will help you with all within their reach;
Just come down any night and you can walk by electric light
If you can only find the lights upon the Beach!

Of course, you know the squire who will give you lemonade on a wire,
Or moonlight on a shovel, just the same;
You can find any day, up at the Raleigh.
Deeply interested in the game, you must be a dead-game sport if you visit that resort.
With your boodle always within your reach.
There are no flies, they say, on the boys at the Raleigh.
They're some of the "real people" on the Beach!

The grant that beats the band is the round top candy stand.
To all the boys it's nothing but a joke;
On business they were bent, so their boodle on it spent,
And, like their dog, there's nothing left but smoke.
They have Johnny Gue Clothes there, who came from God-Knows-Where.
Now his salary is away beyond his reach.
And the soubrettes behind the stand imagine they look grand.
They're the aristocratic ladies of the Beach!

If hungry you should feel and want a good square meal,
I tell you just the very place to go.
Just take your girl there, and look over the bill of fare,
And you'll surely get the worth there of your dough.
The dairy lunch, it isn't it not even for a minute,
And I tell you Tom, the cook, he is a peach.
Terrapin steak and silver herring, cross-eyed crab and rainbow salmon
Can be had at Barton's restaurant at the Beach!

We'll soon have Labor Day, after that we'll get away,
That is if we can—you can bet; and wherever we may be, on land or on sea,
The parting of our friends we do regret,
Though some of us are broke we have stuff that we can soak.
Remember, boys, all practice what you preach.
Now here's where there's the hitch,
There's not one there that will get rich.
With the boodle that he carries from the Beach!

The spotted gunnel, or butterfish, rolls its eggs into a ball and coils itself around them protectively.

Coolidge Possessions Sell Quickly To Collectors Of Historical Relics

HOUSEHOLD effects of the late Calvin Coolidge did not stay long unsold when they were offered at auction recently in the former president's old home town of Northampton, Mass.

Friends of the late chief executive and also professional buyers of articles possessing historical and sentimental value quickly bid in the various items offered by George H. Bean, auctioneer. Mrs. Coolidge, before sailing for a tour of Europe, had ordered the household goods placed on sale.

The old washing machine, used many years by the Coolidge family and still in excellent working order, was acquired by a factory representative, to install in its museum of oldtime washers. In every way it showed sharp contrast to the sleek, attractive, quietly operating washers of today.

CHARITY JACKETS TRIM LYNNHAVEN

Second Game of Series Won by Down-County Team; Doubleheader Tomorrow.

Meeting the Lynnhaven Crabs in the second game of the summer series last Sunday afternoon, the Charity Red Jackets scored their second successive win over last year's county champions by the score of 5-3. The victory marked the second win for Charity over the Memorial Day weekend, for the Maple nine was sent home Saturday on the short end of a 2-0 tally.

Of the eight runs registered in Sunday's inter-county classic, four were acquired by the over-the-fence route. Two of Lynnhaven's three runs were homers smacked out by Gallup and Turner, with Frain and Upton giving a similar performance for the home team. Ames and Caton handled the ball for Lynnhaven, with Hautz pitching for Charity and Harrell behind the plate. Thirteen of the batters to face Hautz were retired via the strikeout route.

In Saturday's game, Hudgins hit a home run for the victors. A splendid exhibition of pitching was provided by Wade, Maple's hurler, who struck out eleven of the opposing batters. Self, who pitched for Charity, retired six on strikes. Throughout the entire game, the Maple team did not succeed in getting a man beyond second base.

Saturday, beginning at 2 o'clock, the Charity team will play St. Brides and the Monarchs in a doubleheader in the new Charity ball park. On Sunday, at 3:30 o'clock, the Jackets will entertain the Portlock nine, also on the home field.

Oil Taxes Double 1929 Collections

Total tax collections, which in 1929 amounted to $9,700,000,000, reached a depression low in 1933, but have since risen so rapidly that last year they came within $200,000,000 of equalling their pre-depression level, the Taxation Bulletin of the American Petroleum Industries Committee states in an article entitled "Tax Trends and the National Income."

While general tax collections were dropping during the early years of the depression, there was no similar dip in the taxes levied on the petroleum industry. As a result, petroleum taxes, which in 1929 amounted to about $620,000,000, were nearly double that sum last year, totaling $1,127,259,232. This constituted about 12 percent of all taxes levied, according to the Bulletin.

"Total tax collections have fluctuated in close conformity with changes in national income," it states. "Petroleum taxes have, on the other hand, shown no comparable relationship—they continued to increase even in the face of a decline in national income."

In Days Gone By

Ten Years Ago With The Virginia Beach News

Work on the sewage disposal plant and the new sewer mains which were let out to contractors sometime ago, is progressing nicely and town Engineer J. M. Baldwin announces that all will be completed not later than June 1st. This work will cost in the neighborhood of $50,000 and includes in addition to the disposal plant, forty-six hundred feet of ten and fifteen-inch mains and five thousand feet of eight-inch laterals. These improvements are being made in a part of Virginia Beach where there has been no sewage facilities heretofore, and where extensive real estate developments are taking place.

Major I. Walke Truxton announced this week that bids for widening the Norfolk to Virginia Beach boulevard four and a half feet, would be asked for in the next few days. The Highway Commission's engineers, said Major Truxton, have been hard at work on plans since the allocation of $132,000 for the projected work, who explained that now that the money has been set aside that the engineers could secure bids for the work without express authority from the commission, although the commission will have to approve the bids.

One of Virginia Beach's old landmarks, the store recently occupied by B. P. Holland, is being torn down preparatory to the erection by the Laskin interests, the new purchasers, of a modern arcade building with several stores on each side. This old building was one of the first constructed in the business section of Virginia Beach, and with its passing much of the old traces of "Old Virginia Beach" are disappearing.

Contract for the construction of a $60,000 building on 17th Street, containing store and office room, and a theatre with a seating capacity of 300 was let by Elmer R. Laskin Tuesday. The building will replace the old frame structure on the north side of 17th Street which was formerly occupied by B. P. Holland for many years.

Dr. E. H. Morrison announced that he let contract Tuesday for the erection of a handsome brick building on Atlantic Avenue just north of 17th Street. This new building is to be the permanent home of the Virginia Bank and Trust Company and will have two stores in addition to the bank quarters, which have already been leased to real estate firms coming to the Beach.

Work on the foundation of Virginia Beach's newest hotel the "Pinewood" began Monday morning with a large corps of teams and workmen on the ground. This hotel which is being built by the Laskin interests and Louis Segal of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., is to be four stories high and will contain fifty-three rooms, with a private bath for every room.

A real estate deal of great importance was brought to light Tuesday when R. W. Woolley, of Montclair, N. J., receiver of the Burton Line and President of the Birdneck Realty Company, announced the purchase of the Brooks farm at a price said to be $100,000. This farm contains 317 acres which lie at the head of Lynnhaven Bay and four miles from Virginia Beach.

A meeting was held Friday afternoon in the office of Francis E. Turpin, Advertising Fund Manager of the Norfolk-Portsmouth Chamber of Commerce, for the purpose of considering tourist traffic for the coming season. There were present at the meeting representatives from all the steamship lines and railroads entering Norfolk, including R. L. Jones, General Passenger Agent of the Baltimore Steam Packet Company; H. C. Bowen, of Baltimore, General Passenger Agent of the Chesapeake Line; W. H. Callahan of Washington, Traffic Manager of the Norfolk and Washington Steamboat Company. There were also present traffic representatives from the Eastern Shore, and President Leon T. Seawell of the Chamber of Commerce. T. P. Thompson, ex-president, joined in the discussion.

After living for more than 30 years in a hole which he dug in the ground, Ivan Kramanovich, a hermit, has died near Belgrade, Yugoslavia, aged 80, and his sole estate consisted of a coin worth 12 cents.

TRADING GAINS ARE SUSTAINED

Substantial Margins Over Last Year Shown in Weekly Commerce Report.

Retail trade levels throughout the country were well sustained in keeping with the trend of recent weeks, while in virtually all cases the substantial margin over last year continued, according to nationwide reports this week to the Department of Commerce. Wholesale leveled off in most markets, although brisk business in New York reflected excellent retail results over the country. There were no signs of recession in industry, while seasonal employment rose sharply and construction moved forward with increased momentum. The agricultural situation was affected by weather conditions, rain having brought relief to some areas, while there remained considerable evidence of drought damage.

Drought Continues Here
Spotted drought areas were reported by St. Louis, Memphis, Norfolk, Savannah, Seattle and Louisville. Corn was in good shape in Missouri except in the Southwest where moisture was lacking. In Memphis, it was estimated 10% of the cotton crop in that immediate section will have to be replanted, while in the Norfolk area truck crops were damaged. Dry weather cut the production of tobacco plants in the blue grass region of Kentucky, while the strawberry crop in the Paducah area was cut to 400 cars from 827 last year. The Louisville report also said that lamb prices at Flemingsburg were the highest since 1929. Heavy rains in Texas delayed farm work and retarded the onion harvest. Excellent rains were also reported by Kansas City, Omaha and Minneapolis with scattered showers in the St. Louis and Savannah areas. Dust storms in Nebraska were ended. Celery and tomatoes continued to move in fair volume from Florida and the first car of melons was shipped from Lake County.

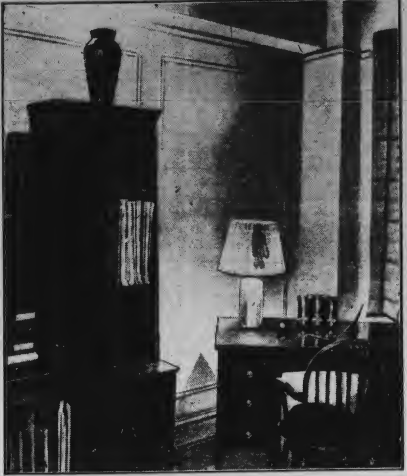

Seasonal farm crops created a labor demand in the Portland area where 2,000 berry pickers were wanted and it was indicated the demand would increase as other crops mature. The National Reemployment Service of Kentucky placed 1,530 workers and the Louisville report said there was a shortage of building craftsmen in 15 principal Kentucky cities. In Pittsburgh 12,362 were dropped from relief rolls. The berry fields of Kentucky and sugar beet fields of Nebraska and Montana were also employing hundreds. In Kansas City, there was a shortage of skilled mechanics in brick-laying and iron workers' trades. Private employment gains were also reported by St. Louis, Indianapolis, Memphis, Wilmington and Detroit. April factory employment in Toledo, was the highest in five years. Retail trade in Portland was affected by strikes in the logging, sawmill and automobile mechanic groups. The Railway Terminal Co. of Dallas restored a 10% pay cut to 750 workers.

Workers Added
A Chicago firm planned to spend $1,000,000 to develop a 20,000,000 ton coal field in Randolph and Macon counties, Missouri. The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. added 100 workers to the Springfield, Mass., plant. Industrial power consumption in Detroit reached a new peak for the year and ground was broken for a million dollar 11-story addition to the General Motors research laboratories. Buffalo reported factory employment and pay rolls highest since 1930. A corporation was chartered for a $7,500,000 pulp and paper mill at Port St. Joe, Florida. Announcement of price advances effective in the third quarter, was expected to make June steel production highest of the year, according to the Pittsburgh report. Heavier industrial operations tended upward in New York. The Southern Pacific Railroad asked bids on 3,000 freight cars. The Monsanto Chemical Co. of St. Louis planned to spend most of a $6,000,000 stock issue for a phosphoric acid plant and mineral lands at Columbia, Tenn. In Cleveland, the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad placed orders for $11,925,000 of rolling stock, while the machine tool industry had 84% better business in the first four months of the year than last year.

Small resorts in England are protesting because the government wants $700 a week, plus expenses, for 14 concerts by military bands.

Ever Make Lights From Vases? It's Worth Trying!

By Jean Prentice

Vases make charming decorative lighting units when wired and equipped with 100-watt bulbs. The interiors of the vases must be pure white, of course. Some stores carry them already wired. The effect produced is charming indeed.

WE hear so much about indirect lighting nowadays. Architects and decorators who strive for soft, pleasing effects invariably incorporate it into their plans and designs by means of built-in coves and panels.

A very simple and effective way to achieve lighting of this type is by means of ordinary vases. That is, ordinary vases that are given a different sort of treatment. Let me tell you about it. It's really quite simple, and costs a mere trifle.

Must Harmonize With Furnishings

The vases are selected to harmonize with the decorative scheme of the room, then wired to accommodate a 100-watt bulb. Some of them come ready-made in this way, and may be obtained at most department stores and specialty shops handling objects of this kind.

Should you decide to use an old vase and do the wiring yourself, or have the work done for you, be sure that you get vases that are white on the inside, so that they will properly reflect, and not absorb the light. The small hole through which the wire runs from the lamp socket to the wall plug or convenience-outlet should be drilled not at the bottom of the vase, but at the side, about an inch or so from the bottom, so that the fixture will rest on an even base. A small reflector attached to the socket inside the base will throw more light upward and onto the ceiling, where it will be reflected in all directions. (Better have the wiring done by an electrical expert unless you are quite experienced at this sort of thing.)

Results Should Be Checked

Light thus obtained is very decorative in character, and provides soft general illumination. I have seen as many as four in a room, mounted on bookcases and tables where they couldn't glare into anyone's eyes, and the result was really something to enthuse about.

Of course, even the best of decorative lighting effects must be aided by light of sufficient amount from floor and table lamps, and the general result checked by a light meter to make certain that there is enough illumination for such severe eye tasks as reading and sewing. Among the advantages of supplementary decorative lighting such as is obtained from lighted vases is that the illumination in the room becomes more flexible, and may be adapted to the changing moods and requirements of the family.

WHEN springtime fills you with ambition to plan surprises for the family circle, give a thought to an old-fashioned dainty, jelly roll—and its many delicious variations. Did you ever try one with a lemon or orange filling? If you have thought jelly roll too hard to make, follow this recipe and you'll surely succeed. Serve jelly roll for Sunday dinner with a serving of ice cream on top of each slice—a perfect dessert!

HOUSE TO PROBE WILDLIFE PLANS

Wide Charges of Damage to Fish and Game by Federal Bureaus to Be Aired.

Aroused at the lack of co-ordination between federal agencies spending hundreds of millions of relief dollars on projects without prior consideration of possible damage to valuable fish, game and fur resources, Congress has launched an inquiry into the situation.

The Special House Committee on Conservation or Wildlife Resources has begun hearings to which officials of all identified federal bureaus have been summoned. Heads of national wildlife conservation organizations also have been invited to appear.

Coordinated Program Sought

The committee hopes to bring about a coordination of federal activities affecting wildlife which Thomas H. Beck, who headed President Roosevelt's Wildlife Restoration Committee, charged "is scattered all over the lot from the Lighthouse Service to the Marine Corps."

Mr. Beck urged the House committee to secure the appointment, by executive order of a "Wildlife Restoration Commissioner." The commissioner to act as a coordinator under a committee composed of the Secretaries of Interior, Agriculture and Commerce, John C. Huntington, vice-president of the More Game Birds Foundation, supported the recommendation.

Illustrating results of lack of co-ordination on some federal projects, Lt.-Col. Glen E. Edger-ton, U. S. Army Engineers, testified that 45,500 acres of the 55,620-acre Mississippi Wildlife Refuge, purchased in the states of Wisconsin and Minnesota with federal funds, now would be inundated in a river improvement project.

Unwise Drainage Cited

The 8,000-acre Lower Klamath Lake restoration project in California is another example of unwise drainage cited. Set aside by President Theodore Roosevelt as "one of the greatest wildfowl nurseries in the United States," it was charged that the area was drained by the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation. Now the lake is being restored by the U. S. Biological Survey after the drained land was found unfit for agriculture.

"Conservation leaders of Congress are determined, if possible, to bring about co-ordinated action in these federal agencies," A. Willis Robertson, of Virginia, Chairman of the House Committee, stated. "If I am any judge of sentiment in the House, legislative action will be taken, if necessary, to compel a co-ordinated control, even if it is necessary to bring all of these agencies under one general director. The work is of too great importance and too much money is being expended to follow a hit-or-miss policy."

tors in all sections of the Beach. Although exact attendance figures are not now available, it was learned this week that the Norfolk-Southern used 13 buses to haul 367 newboys into the Beach from the docks of the Washington steamer, in addition to other special buses employed to bring 221 from the New York boat, 64 from the Washington boat and 124 from the Baltimore dock. In addition to the usual vacationists, the Cavalier Hotel entertained an approximate 150 bridge experts from all sections of the State and leading cities of the East in the third annual Cavalier Bridge Tournament, while down at the Chalfonte a similar number of delegates to the eastern convalesce of the Alpha Iota Sorority held forth in a two-day session. Merchants and hotel men alike reported that money was easier than has been the case at any time in recent years. Every indication was given that the backbone of the depression had been definitely broken so far as the Beach is concerned, and a banner season is now anticipated.

mediate danger of overproduction of cotton and tobacco may have greatly increased and there is grave danger of over-production under anything like average weather conditions. The Virginia director urges, therefore, that Virginia growers, who have not completed the planting of peanuts give careful consideration to this situation. Director Hutcheson urges every Virginia farmer who is not thoroughly familiar with the new soil conservation program to get in touch with his county agent or county committeemen at once and decide whether it will be to his advantage to participate in the 1936 soil conservation program. The extended drought makes this especially important. Many farmers who have not been able to plant their normal acreage of corn, tobacco and other soil depleting crops, still have ample time to plant soil conserving crops, such as soybeans and cowpeas. Farmers who do this may qualify for benefit payments under the soil conservation program.

LAND REELECTED AS COUNCILMAN; CONTEST VIEWED AS LOCAL UPSET

Ewell and Capps Are Victorious; Roy Barnes Fails in Re-election Bid.

WILL TAKE OFFICES AT SEPTEMBER 28 SESSION

Ten Candidates in Field; 429 Ballots Cast From Voting List of 510.

Last Tuesday's councilmanic election, generally conceded something of an upset by local political leaders, witnessed the return of Russell H. Land to the seat on the council that he has held for twelve years and victories for Jesse P. Ewell and C. H. Capps, newcomers to the Town governing body. Roy A. Barnes, who sought reelection, ran fourth in the voting, while Robert B. Taylor, the other retiring councilman, did not stand for reelection.

Voting was light during the day and, when the polls were closed, it was learned that 429 ballots were cast out of a qualified voting list of 510 voters.

Ewell Leads Race

The official count announced by the judges of election showed Mr. Ewell running ahead of the other nine contestants with a total vote of 167. Mr. Land, three votes behind the leader, was in second place, with Mr. Capps running third with 161 votes. The balance of the field polled the following vote: Roy Barnes, 148; E. E. Chapman, 113; C. C. Widgren, 79; A. P. Garrison, 69; H. G. Moore, 74; Dr. George Meredith, 46; and W. B. Rudolph, 43.

Members, Ewell and Capps will take their new seats on the council in September, when the current terms expire. Serving with them will be W. F. Crockett, Stanley Smith, Jr., and William Patton.

Next Election in 1938

Councilmen at Virginia Beach must stand for election once every four years, with three members chosen on each even year. In 1938, when the next election will be held, the voters also will cast their ballots for candidates seeking the Mayor's office, now held by Roy Smith.

Election officials were B. P. Holland, C. E. Hoback and Sidney Simmons, judges, and J. W. James and Howard Ward, clerks.

Church Services to Change

The hours of masses at the Star of the Sea Catholic Church will be changed from 8:15 and 10:15 to 7:30, 9:30 and 10:30 a. m. on June 28. Until then, the winter schedule of services will be effective.

Air Forces Will Move on Beach Over Weekend for Annual Camp

Squadrons From Langley and Mitchell Fields Ordered Here for Summer; John Marshall Cadet Corps to Arrive Sunday for Week's Work on Range.

The opening of the annual summer encampment of air squadrons from Langley and Mitchell fields and other important aviation units of the U. S. Army over the weekend at the State Military Reservation will return to this resort one of the novel attractions offered each summer to local vacationists. The unusual sight of mimic air warfare in the skies directly above the resort, a daily occurrence from mid-June through September, is regarded by many visitors as one of the chief attractions of Virginia Beach's summer recreation program.

Advance detachments of ground forces will move into the camp early Saturday and begin immediate preparations for the squadrons which will land here Sunday and Monday. All important Army aviation units in the east will be here for coast defense practice at some time during the summer, with a full concentration of men and ships planned for a later date.

Cadet Corps Due Monday

In addition to the Army squadrons, the facilities of the local State reservation will be utilized by marine and naval detachments, together with units from the regular army, which will cooperate with the local forces in battle practice. Also scheduled to arrive here over this present weekend is the John Marshall Cadet Corps, of Richmond, commanded by Captain J. M. Anthony.

For those who are not arming, the chief attraction of this weekend will be the opening of two night clubs new to the Beach.

Bands of national prominence will be featured in the imposing new structures, which will join with beach clubs and casinos already opened to provide a varied sort of entertainment for the resort's visitors. According to the local Chamber of Commerce office, the recreational facilities now in operation surpass in both quality and quantity those of all previous seasons.

Attendance Records Broken

Attendance records for the second week of the official summer season were shattered a survey of hotel and cottage occupancies reveals. Clubs and hotels have been reporting midseason crowds during their early season openings, and hotels not usually open at this date are doing a flourishing business. Payment of the bonus checks next week is expected to swell present crowds by many thousands.

On Monday, the Seashore State Park will be opened officially by the Virginia Commission on Conservation and Development. This novel experiment in low-cost vacationing, developed on the north end of Virginia Beach, is being watched closely by other eastern seaboard states which are considering similar projects.

The new park project, which includes a wide expanse of beach and many acres of sand dune and lake country, is fully equipped with cabins, picnic grounds, bathing and dancing pavilions and camping equipment. Many miles of bridges lead to and motor roads wind through the historic Cape. (Continued on Page Five)

CHURCHES PLAN 3 MORE GAMES NEGRO SERVICES WON BY CHARITY

Union Services to Be Held in Beach Churches Each Sunday Night.

Special Sunday services for Negroes employed and visiting in and near Virginia Beach will be held in the First Presbyterian Church, beginning next Sunday night at 9:30 o'clock. The services will continue each Sunday night throughout the summer, alternating at the Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist Churches.

Hotel and cottage operators employing Negro help have been asked to cooperate with the sponsors of the union service and to encourage their colored help to attend. Need for such a service has been felt during past years, and its scheduling for this season comes as a result of conferences recently held by the members of the Virginia Beach Ministerial Association.

Choirs Are Engaged

During the first three or four Sunday choir will be brought here from neighboring churches as the season advances and among the colored help employed, it is hoped that sufficient voices for a choir can be recruited and so dispense with the outside assistance.

Although four local ministers have volunteered their services for the entire season, it is the belief of those sponsoring the union meetings that an occasional Negro preacher can be recruited from among the Beach workers to take over the duties of the pulpit. The Rev. B. B. Bland of the Methodist Church will open the series on Sunday night, over which the minister of the church the Rev. J. B. Clover, Jr., will preside.

From June 7 through the first Sunday in September the Rev. B. B. Bland will preach on the first Sunday of each month. He will be followed by the Rev. R. W. Eastman, of Galilee Episcopal Church; the Rev. Clover; and the Rev. L. W. Meachum, pastor of the First Baptist Church here.

An offering will be taken at each of these services and will be turned over to the Virginia Beach Community Fund for relief work among local Negroes.

County Team Continues on Way to Championship Honors in Tidewater.

Continuing a winning pace set in the first game of the season, the Charity Red Jackets last weekend met three local teams on their new home diamond and sent each nine back to the showers on the short ends of the day's scoring. By virtue of their splendid performance in these early-season games, Charity now stands well to the fore as logical contenders for the semi-pro championship of Tidewater Virginia.

In the first half of a double-header played last Saturday afternoon, Charity, behind the masterful pitching of Self, defeated St. Brides, 14-3, in a lopsided game. Charity collected 17 hits off the two pitchers provided by the visitors to five allowed the St. Brides batsmen. Hudgins started off the afternoon's fireworks in real style by knocking out a homer in the first inning with the bases loaded. Waterman and M. Lovitt also collected non-stop trips for the winners. F. Harrell was behind the plate for Charity, while Herring, Perry and Baker worked the plate for St. Brides.

The final game of the afternoon, which was marred by seven errors, ended with an 8-7 victory for Charity over the Monarchs. Self again was credited with the game, relieving Upton who had started for the locals. Regatto, Brown and White hurled for the Monarchs, with Donovan behind the plate. Meloni hit a home run for the visiting team.

Meeting Portlock on Sunday afternoon, Charity again turned in a win to the tune of 12-9, with a total of nine errors featuring the game. Three more home runs were registered, two for Charity by Gallup and Lovitt and one for Portlock by Bondurant, who pitched the opening innings for the visitors. He was later succeeded by Peoples with Miles behind the plate. Hantz and Harrell worked for the Jackets.

The Red Jackets have added strength to their lineup by the addition of Dick Gallup, who hit a home run in his first appearance. (Continued on Page Eight)

PARTY LEADERS MEET NEXT WEEK IN NORFOLK FOR STATE SESSION

Decisions of Convention Will Play Leading Role in Price's Fortunes.

NOTABLES WILL ATTEND IMPORTANT GATHERING

Wide Interest Evidenced in Congressional Battle in Second District.

June may be the month of brides, but June, 1936, will find columns and columns of newspaper space given over to politics. Opening of the Republican national convention in Cleveland this week paved the way for political writers to do their stuff.

State politics, quiet for the last few weeks, will claim page one position in the newspapers, particularly next week when the Democratic convention is held in Norfolk. Pre-convention gossip has been plentiful already.

Representative Clinton A. Woodrum, Roanoke, staunch friend of the national administration, will deliver the keynote address at temporary chairman of the convention. He will be introduced by State Chairman J. Murray Hooker.

Darden to Speak

Other members of Virginia's delegation in Congress will give speeches. Representative Colgate W. Darden, Jr., Norfolk, will give the address of welcome to the response to be delivered by Representative Patrick D. Drewry, Petersburg.

Ashburn, Dovell, Williamsburg, speaker of the House of Delegates, is expected to be selected permanent chairman and will give an address.

Election of delegates to the national convention to be held in Philadelphia will be a prime business matter to come before the more than 2,000 Democrats attending the State rally. Also to be named are presidential electors, one from each district; seven members from each district to the Democratic state central committee; two members of the Democratic national committee from Virginia and a chairman of the party in the State for four years. Senator Harry F. Byrd and Mrs. R. C. Watts, Lynchburg, are now. (Continued on Page Five)

BUS ROUTE BIDS ARE CALLED FOR

Seventeen Contracts to Be Let by School Board at Next Meeting.

Bids on seventeen county school bus routes, on from one to three year contracts, will be opened in the offices of the school board on Monday, June 15, according to the specifications posted this week at the Court House by Frank W. Cox, Superintendent of Schools. In addition to the services of these operators, six new buses will be purchased and operated by the school board, the beginning of a system of countywide operation of all buses used for the transportation of school children.

Such contracts as are accepted will continue over a maximum period of three years, with the prospective operators privileged to bid for one, two or three of the years. In addition to the terms proposed in the bids, operators will be required to carry insurance on their vehicles and the passengers so transported.

The routes as stated in the specifications are as follows: Sigma, Pango and Court House. Nanny's Creek Route. Seaside Neck and Sand Bridge. Mapleton. Salem, Court House and Kempville.

Frolics and French Casino Open Tomorrow, Adding to Night Life

Playland, in New Casino, Ready for Season; Village Barn's Debut Delayed Until June 20; Interesting Opening Presentations Planned.

The Frolics and French Casino, newcomers to the night life of the Beach, will state their formal openings tomorrow night, with elaborate presentations planned at both locations. Further down the Avenue, on the site of the old Club Tallyho, preparations are being rushed to completion for the opening of the Village Barn on the following Saturday night.

Planned for the Frolics, which is under the management of P. L. Woodard, is an all-star colored entertainment, featuring Clint Turner and his swing band and a black and tan revue of the type to be witnessed at Connie's Inn in New York. Playboy Holland, who comes here after long engagements in New York and Chicago, will act as master of ceremonies for this newest innovation in the night life of the Beach and will direct the revue.

Raised Dance Floor

The management is presenting the Frolics as the most beautiful night club on the Beach, complete with a raised dance floor and accommodations for at least 400 persons. Dancing will begin at 10 o'clock and run to 3 o'clock in the morning, with a late floor show scheduled for 2 o'clock. The decorative scheme of the club, located just north of Seaside Park, is red and yellow, with ray caricatures lining the walls.

Entertainment will feature several specialty acts, including a "Jungle" number, and several outstanding colored soloists. The program will be changed frequently throughout the summer.

Up at the old Embassy Club, now known as the French Casino, everything is in readiness for the Saturday night opening. Doug Tunstall, as master of ceremonies, will present Billy Brooks and his orchestra, which last year furnished the music for the Crystal Club and the Earl Lindley Revue. An all-girl show coming here direct from the Arcadia Club in Philadelphia, Jimmy White, soloist with the Brooks band, will do the "vocals."

The French Casino has been completely renovated and decorated to conform with the latest modes of decorative treatment in vogue in similar clubs in the north and east. Gay Parisian shadow-box scenes line the walls, together with cutout figures of French dancers in characteristic poses. Indirect lighting adds to the effectiveness of the club.

Playland Opens Tomorrow

Although Playland, the casino to be run in connection with the Casino property, will be opened this weekend, the formal opening of the Village Barn, under the management of J. E. Rose, has been delayed until June 20. A large crew of workmen has been engaged in remodeling and rebuilding certain portions of the two buildings, and one of the most interesting and attractive recreation centres ever opened here is now taking shape on the site of the formerly untenanted property.

Notable features of the new setup will include an ocean front open-air restaurant, which will be operated by a chef and his staff formerly associated with the Mayflower Hotel in Washington. (Continued on Page Eight)

RED CROSS UNIT PROGRAM PLANS TO AID VETERANS BEFORE FARMERS

Will Assist in Identification of Ex-Soldiers Applying for Bonus Certificates.

Acting upon a suggestion made by the national headquarters, the Princess Anne unit of the American Red Cross will have representatives of the chapter stationed in the county's post offices during the distribution of the veterans' service bonuses for the purpose of identifying applicants. This action was agreed upon at the meeting of the Red Cross held last Tuesday afternoon at the Court House.

The meeting was addressed by Miss Sadie Jones, district representative of the national office. Dr. Albert V. Croley, chairman of the disaster relief committee of the Norfolk Chapter, and by Mrs. Adams, chairman of the Norfolk unit. Mrs. Bruce Dixon, chairman of the county organization, presided.

Local Plans Outlined

Emphasis was placed by the visiting speakers upon two phases of the Red Cross program which are now being featured: first aid stations and life-saving classes. Two highway first aid stations, it was learned, will be placed in the county for the use of motorists during the summer. Dr. W. L. Taylor, of Virginia Beach, was elected chairman of this committee and the stations will be placed at locations selected by him.

Dr. Taylor also will organize and train classes in first aid and life-saving. It was Miss Jones' suggestion that each county officer be enrolled in such classes, together with all other representative citizens in order that their services might be rendered intelligently and capably to those needing such.

The organization of life-saving classes at Virginia Beach and at other locations in the county was stressed by the speaker. A chairman for this phase of local activity will be selected in the next week or two and a schedule of classes announced. This part of the Red Cross program, it was agreed, is particularly valuable to those communities located near the water.

Organization Meetings to Be Held Throughout County During Next Week.

Six hundred and ten different farms in Princess Anne county have signed work sheets indicating their willingness to cooperate with the Federal government in the soil conservation program outlined for 1936. H. W. Ozlin announced this week. This number, he added, represents a greater response to the Federal plea for cooperation than was ever accorded a planting program by local farmers.

The next move in the program, Mr. Ozlin stated, is to organize and to elect permanent officers to administer the soil conservation activities in the county. Meetings to effect such organization and to prepare the plans needed to make the program operative will be held during the following week at these locations:

Meetings Scheduled

Kempville District, Kempville School, Tuesday, June 16. Lynnhaven District, Oceana School, Wednesday, June 17. Pungo District, Creeds School, Thursday, June 18. Seaboard District, Court House, Friday, June 19, and Blackwater District, Blackwater School, Monday, June 22. All meetings will be called to order at 8 o'clock.

An urgent invitation has been sent out by the county agent to all farmers participating in the movement to attend the meetings. Following the election of officers, details of the program will be discussed and the cooperating farmers told just what steps must be taken to secure the benefit payments.

Farmers Generally Favorable

County farmers are reported to be generally favorable to the soil conservation program, and almost every prominent grower in the county has signed his work sheet, indicating his willingness to lend his assistance to the plan. All but two truck farmers, it was learned, have signed work sheets. Discussing crop conditions and the effects of the long drought. (Continued on Page Eight)

BEACH CHAMBER PLANS VIGOROUS PUBLICITY FUND CAMPAIGN DRIVE

Membership Application Blanks Distributed to 200 Hotels and Businesses.

$5000 GOAL IS SET BY ORGANIZATION LEADERS

Information Office and Promotion Services Functioning Since May 15.

Seasonal membership application blanks for participation in the activities of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce were mailed this week to more than 200 hotel and business firms operating on the Beach, in Norfolk and in adjacent territory dependent in some measure upon the local resort for support. A total of $5,000 is sought by the executives of the organization to carry through the promotion and information plans made for this year.

Assessments Made

Instead of the system formerly used under which contributions of any size were sought from those interested in the development of vacation trade here, the required amount this year has been apportioned among hotel and business interests according to a schedule of membership rates approved last week by the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce. Hotels will be invited to participate in the program by the payment of a specified sum for each room, while merchants' appropriations have been assessed upon the total volume of business reported for last year. In all instances, the size, location and prestige of the many agencies have been considered in levying the assessments.

"The sum sought this year is regarded as those charged with the development of the program as a very conservative amount, each penny of which will be spent upon the promotion of the Beach and its environs and upon an information bureau which has been established in the Roland Court, on Seventeenth Street. Don Bellwell is serving as managing director of the organization, in charge of all promotion activity, and Miss Evelyn Surles has been established in the information office. Miss Surles handled the information office established here several years ago by the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce, then in charge of Beach promotion.

Daily Releases Sent Out

The newly developed organization has been functioning since May 15, sending out daily news and society releases to a selected list of daily newspapers in eastern America, preparing pictorial and information booklets, distributing feature stories for resort editions of all newspapers and magazines, and developing a pictorial service for newspapers and news services. To date, many hundreds of stories and news pictures have been released, the latter under the direction of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, which is handling all pictorial releases for the local office.

When a field of ten men compete for a given three offices, the result, as was evidenced in last Tuesday's councilmanic election, is anybody's race. There were definite upsets in the individual propositions bandied about the town, but there was no logical way of determining the contest's results before the final tallying of the ballots. Not even the fact that only one of the three or four strongest candidates made the grade should occasion much surprise.

Russell Land's return to the council is a source of gratification. He has served this community long and faithfully, always with an eye to its continued progressive development and with a minimum of individual or selfish motivation. Conservative in attitude, he always has been one of the first to endorse those projects seemingly designed in the best interests of the Town, and the vote of confidence given him on Tuesday bespeaks the regard of his fellow-townsmen. His defeat by an inexperienced individual would have been little short of tragedy.

We know little of the abilities or capacities of the other two successful councilmen, Messrs. Capps and Ewell, who come to their new duties wholly inexperienced in the way of Town management, but eager, say their supporters, to advance the common interests of those whom they represent. We shall make careful note of their actions as Town Fathers, extending them the while our sincere wishes for a successful term.

Of those defeated, greatest surprise was occasioned by the race made by E. E. Chapman, a former member of the council, and by Roy A. Barnes, candidate for reelection. While these men stood well in advance of the other five candidates, their showing against the victors was a relatively poor one.

As we observed in these columns last week, problems of tremendous importance to Virginia Beach face solution by the council during the next two years. This community stands on the brink of a marked development as the outstanding resort on the north Atlantic coast, and the actions of those who will guide the Town's destinies during that period will determine to a great extent how rapidly that development shall progress. The more than any other agency will set the tempo and the speed of local progress.

The News has nothing to say regarding the political affiliations of the victors. We believe that such considerations should be forgotten and only the best interests of the Town weigh in the future deliberations of the councilmanic body. That ideal may be too impractical for successful fruition, but only by the steering of such a course may we hope for most significant results.

"FULL STOP" ORDER NEEDED

Last weekend's tragedy on the Laskin Road serves as but another reminder that no highway in the immediate vicinity of Virginia Beach carries such potentialities of disaster to the motorist as this popular shortcut from the Virginia Beach Boulevard into the northern end of this community. Scene of the majority of the major accidents of recent years, such potentialities of disaster are increased as motor traffic becomes heavier each year on this important link of the local highway network.

As we see it, two steps are needed to curb this threat of disaster and to lessen the fear of accidents. First, a "full stop" sign should be placed by the State Highway Department at the western terminus of the Laskin Road at its junction with the Beach Boulevard. "Slow" signs mean little to the average motorist, but the usual driver will be inclined to obey that order which demands a full stop before entering the main highway. Since it is this junction which provides the locale for most of the accidents, it is our thought that the "full stop" sign will do a great measure of good in eliminating the hazard to life and property which now exists.

It also would be in the interests of general motoring safety if the elevation now existing between the two roads were to be removed and a full view of the boulevard afforded those who use the Laskin Road. All too frequently the testimony in the accident cases which have their origin here is to the effect that "we couldn't see the other car from the road."

Equally important is the proper marking of all cross roads and streets, in the Town limits as in the county, which intersect the Laskin Road. Those who use Holly Road know full well the hazard presented by the speeding through traffic, yet the absence of all signs on it and adjacent roads and streets gives no inkling of the danger which lies immediately ahead. Serious accidents have been averted here only by pure luck, and the threat of grave damage will not be removed until the proper "full stop" signs are erected at the intersections.

The loss of life from motor accidents is a blow to the whole community, as well as a black mark upon its record as a recreation center. All agencies concerned with highway safety should cooperate to make the Laskin Road and all other highways leading into the Beach as safe as such thoroughfares can be made. One of the best means of accomplishing such an objective is the liberal use of the "full stop" sign and a vigilant policing of the roads by state and local police officers, intent upon apprehending those who disregard the safety measures.

THANK YOU, MR. MAYOR

Last Thursday afternoon, while the News was on its way through the press, the unsightly derelicts that have rested all too long on Twenty-first Street were removed by the Town Engineer at the direction of Mayor Roy Smith. We need not say that the appearance of that immediate section has been improved by the action, and residents of the street, as well as all who have objected to the continuance of the junk pile, have applauded the issuance of the order and its proper disposal.

The task of removing such wrecks, the Mayor has opined, is a ticklish business, likely to produce a suit of substantial size against the Town and its alleged aggressive owner. It is our thought that anyone willing to admit ownership of such hulks will find little sympathy extended him by the courts of this or any other community.

The streets of Virginia Beach cannot be construed as indefinite parking places for outworn and useless automobiles. The Mayor's action was, therefore, a move in the general public's interest, for which we extend him our hearty thanks.

Perhaps if we did not remember so clearly Mr. Hoover's prediction of 1928 relative to the chicken in every pot and his further prophecy of 1932 that brass would grow in the nation's streets in the event he was not returned to office, we could follow the course of his argument made Wednesday night to the Republican convention assembled in Cleveland. Somehow, with all of these remembrances and a comparison with actualities, what he said left us cold, and we were led of the forces which removed him from office and equally pleased with those which keep him out of office today.

How pathetic is a reputation leader attempting to insinuate himself into the good graces of those who long since have tossed him into the discard!

Japan is considering a unified land, sea and air transportation policy.

THE VALIANT

Women most sorrowful and good men grim
Carry their poor patched hearts among us here;
Here now, beside you here, limb touching limb,
Eye meeting eye, voice speaking known and near.

But never in your hearing salt or curt.
They do not show their grief by being grave.
It is with common speech they hide their hurt.
These are the brave. These are the very brave.

Honor them stoutly. Help them. Love them more.
Give what they ask, and do not ask them why.
And when they knock, cry to them at your door:

God rest you merry who will sometime die.
Remember then you know all this is done

In vain for the valiant: you yourself are one.

THE ADVENTUROUS ONES

You think yourselves the adventurous ones, you young ones.
And us becalmed, torpid, our days uneventful.

Our blood stagnant, our minds antennae blunted;
But I, who was young and now am old, can tell you
There is no adventure like the adventure of age.

No speed that you, steel-nerved, hazard your lives for Can touch our terrible speed. Paster and faster Night's poles flash by us, day's wires dip between them;
While we, breathless, dizzy, strung, precarious,
(To your eyes tranquil, rue-wrapped) stare from the window.

No zest of pioneer in a new country.
No quiver and shock of beauty first-time-tasted.
Can match ours sharpened zest.

Who, at each day's encounter with familiar beauty,
Ask ourselves, "Is this for the last time?"

You are lusty in love, but you never held woman dearer
Than we hold life, our slim one, our slender darling.
Our sweet, fleet, fickle and false tormentor.

Who stands always on tiptoe, poised to leave us,
Bound to us only by the strength of our will to keep her.

And what's your joy of battle, your pride of conquest
To ours, forlorn defenders of a doomed salient,
Who sweat day by day, grotesquely accoutred

With sword-umbrella, cuirass of anti-phlogestine,
The trained, bloody and invincible troops of death?

MISANTHROPE

Yes, all the unicorns are white,
And all are most abjectly strange;
Forbidden is their pagan might:
Narrow and strict their concept range.

And hungry is their hapless lot,
And hunger pace no herds than they
Who beg from mules, and are forgot.

Who steal a snatch of musty hay.

Yes, lonely are their lives, who sigh,
Who shrug their milky hides forlorn;

Yet, lonely are their lives, but I am the one black unicorn!
AUDREY WURDEMAN

SILENCE

This was silence, terrifying.
One leaf fell, and at its dying
Tall trees quivered with a surge
While echoes crashed from wood to hill.

This was silence. All of sound
Was held by the throat, strangled, drowned;
So when a soft owl turned his head,
My heart leaped up, and fell, stone-dead.

WOMEN AND WORK

The golf links lies so near the mill
That almost every day
The laboring children can look out
And see the men at play.

"In memory of the Supreme Court Quins who liberally allow women and children to work as long as they please and for as little as they like, so that they shall not be too greedy for money," F. P. A. wrote in his "Pilot House" column this week, "we reprint the above quatrain, first printed in this column in 1915, by Sarah N. Cleghorn."

It has become quite the fashion in past months to level verbal barrages at the Supreme Court for its action in invalidating most of the so-called progressive legislation of the Roosevelt Administration. Much of the criticism, we have maintained, is unjust, but there are few who will argue that the court's latest ruling, whereby the New York State minimum wage law for women was invalidated as unconstitutional, is consistent with modern sociological belief or, indeed, with a just interpretation of the basic law under which we live.

No finer or more conclusive evidence that the court is out of step with the day can be found than in the rush of Democrats and Republicans alike to denounce the action. That Mr. Roosevelt and his New-Dealers would use the decision as a means of emphasizing their own program and the court's lack of sympathy for it was a foregone and not unexpected conclusion. That Mr. Hoover, who has lost no time in the past three years to denounce each and every step taken by the administration away from a strict interpretation of Republican constitutionalism, should use no less tempered language in flaying the decision makes the opposition practically unanimous. Even Mr. Landon is reported to be wholly out of sympathy with the ruling.

At a time so fraught with political possibilities as the present, the emphasis placed by Mr. Hoover upon the need for a constitutional amendment to offset the effects of the tribunal's decision must not be underestimated. As the Virginian-Pilot pointed out this week by abandoning the doctrine that the Constitution is perfect as it stands, the Republican chieftains are throwing away months of laborious attacks upon those who hitherto have ventured to express such a view. Inside the Republican party has any valuable ammunition to bring to the coming attack, that one phase of their program stands out as most important. While neither Mr. Hoover nor his associates are willing to concede one point formerly made, it must be recognized that the taking of this latest step weakens the whole course of their argument in the minds of people to whom fine distinctions are incomprehensible.

Why, then, have the Republicans come out at this time with such pointed blasts? The answer, as we see it, lies outside the realm of politics for the question, being one of these essentially human propositions that not even statesmanship may circumvent, strikes deeply into modern conceptions of freedom and liberty. Only the knee may argue that those who men are free whom necessity chains to the slavery of oppressive and unreasoning wages.

We frankly confess amazement at the decision. State laws fixing maximum hours of labor for women have passed the tests established by the court, which ruled that although such laws plainly limit the freedom of contract of women who desire to work more hours than the permitted maximum, the public welfare outweighs the freedom of contract of individuals to undertake it. To argue as did the majority decision, in the minimum wage case, that this same due process right is above invasion in the name of public welfare, is to split hairs in a manner unbefitting to sound logic.

Perhaps it is well that this decision has been so timed. The issue is certain to become of major importance in the coming campaign, and there is every indication to be had that candidates of both major parties will be found supporting it. It is conceivable that out of the discussion will come a sound code of legislation regarding the activities of women and children in industry, together with an understanding of the importance of minimum wage laws for all citizens, regardless of sex or age. Too much hokum has surrounded this whole question in past years—witness the tortuous path of the proposed child labor amendment—and a candid investigation is desired.

If, as the Supreme Court has ruled, such legislation runs afoul of the Constitution, then there is need to adopt Mr. Hoover's suggestion that the Constitution be amended so that States may have the power to enact minimum wages laws. All modern thought and practice points to such a course.

THE AIR SQUADRONS RETURN

Beginning Monday, the Beach will have another assurance that the summer season has definitely arrived, when planes and men from Langley and Mitchell Fields will take up their summer residence at the State Military Reservation. This, we maintain, is one of the Beach's outstanding entertainment features for inland guests, for the daily sight of mimic warfare in the skies directly overhead, in which many hundreds of planes will participate, is a most unusual scene.

Few features of last season's program attracted the attention and interest shown in the impromptu air shows staged here by the U. S. Army planes. These novel maneuvers, we understand, are to be repeated during the present summer, assuring yet another recreational facility for those who vacation here. The airplane is not the novelty it was ten years ago, but the sight of a squadron of ships flying through the air in perfect formation still attracts and fascinates those who watch on the earth below.

Virginia Beach is fortunate to have such splendid field facilities and to be regarded with such favor by those in command of the air squadrons. There is none to doubt the assets of the State Military Reservation to this community, and it is our belief that sufficient local interest in its enlargement to a size suitable for a brigade encampment will be forthcoming during the present summer.

Virginia Beach welcomes all service units which will train here this season, pleased and proud of its selection as the training ground for Uncle Sam's "finest."

As Others See It

VIRGINIA'S POPULATION

Figures just learned by the Census Bureau showing the population of the United States as of July 1, 1935, contain a number of interesting points, and particularly the fact that Virginia has enjoyed an unusual increase during the last five years. Virginia's population has gained from 2,421,851 in 1930 to 2,637,000 in 1935, an increase of 215,149, or nearly nine per cent. The population of the United States increased about four per cent in that period.

It is interesting to note that in 1870 Virginia's population was only 1,225,000, and in 1900, 1,854,000. It has gone steadily forward at the rate of about 300,000 each decade. In gaining 215,000 in five years, therefore a new record has been established.

This increase, of course, may be accounted for to some extent by the concentration of federal employees in the capital, some of whom have overflowed into Virginia, but this would be a relatively small amount. Our sister state of Maryland, which would also gain from this source, shows an increase of only 58,000 in the five-year period.

We believe the time has come when Virginia will go forward with even greater strides. Twenty years ago Virginia was in the mud, and we were somewhat backward in many things. Today we have excellent highways, our historic sites have been marked and repaired and advertised, our school system has been greatly improved, we have an excellent health system, we are developing the great Shenandoah National Park and numerous other parks throughout the state, our government is ably administered, our taxes have been reduced and are among the very lowest in the country we have an excellent climate, excellent industrial and agricultural opportunities, and numerous other advantages for the home-seekers or those who seek economic and cultural opportunities. In short, Virginia is a land of opportunity and a place for good living, with a progressive government yet conservative enough to keep out of debt, balance its budget, and impose only very reasonable taxes. As Virginia continues her good work in setting her house in order and making known her many advantages, we can very naturally expect a continued healthy gain in population.—Winchester Star.

Maybe Not Crazy, But a Little Strange

RICHMOND RED-BAITERS

The attack of Louis F. Powell, Richmond manufacturer, on alleged radicalism at the University of Richmond, both as to the specific instance at issue and the larger implications of the charge, deserves the attention not only of U. of R. alumnae and alumni but of the larger public in Virginia that has so heavy a stake in the educational institutions of the State and in their freedom to impart knowledge for knowledge's sake. It was in connection with the $500,000-building fund campaign undertaken by the school that Mr. Powell made his criticism, stating that Richmond industrialists and business men should not feel that the college comprising the University had any claim upon their purse when they or their form of business enterprise had been rapped by professors in attacks upon the capitalistic system. Passing over the obvious fact that the student body of the school swells the city's budget power tremendously, with resultant benefit to every form of business activity in Richmond, we come to the larger question of the academic freedom that is theoretically accorded the American college.

The issue is complicated by the fact that Mr. Powell feels a personal spite against the University for the reason that its Dean and another faculty member testified before a Senate committee in behalf of the eight-hour day for women. Since the General Assembly of this year killed the measure as applicable to Virginia, Mr. Powell should feel easy on the matter, but the fact remains that he still bears a grudge toward the academicians Messrs. Pinchbeck and Ryland. Cutting through the personal questions, we arrive at the core of Mr. Powell's charge. Is it a fact that "radicalism" is rampant at the school, and that professors are promulgating socialist or communist doctrines? It is undoubtedly a fact that socialist and communist theories are being taught, along with the precepts of monarchy, Fascism and every other form of political control recorded in the history of mankind. That is the function of a college. A professor who describes to his class the organizational set-up of Soviet Russia is no more advocating communism than he is suggesting a monarchist revolution when he explains the monarchial system of England or Sweden.

It is the proper function and sphere of history, economics, government, political science and indeed of every subject save the exact sciences to present for study the governmental system of a nation in order to establish its background. A student reading the plays of Moliere in French class must understand the absolutist milieu of 17th century France; reading the works of Ibsen he must know the social and political background of Norway, a constitutional monarchy. The premises of democracy and of our vaunted liberty are that the individual must be allowed to know, to think, and to select from the material confronting him. "A man can pick his church, his lodge, his club and his political party. Americans have picked Democracy as their system of government. To argue that our student body is getting pink from the reflected hues of red professors merely because doctrines alien to their own are discussed in classrooms for purposes of comparison to build informed future citizens of America is both to ignore facts and repudiate the principles of academic freedom, without which we might as well dispense with our colleges as training places for citizenship. The University of Richmond incident should be a challenge to every other Virginia institution of higher education to air its joints against the attacks of ignorant reactionaries, from whatever class they spring.—Tidewater News.

JOBS FOR 1936 GRADUATES

Whether by virtue of New Deal policies or through natural processes, the men and women who graduate this year from the colleges and universities enjoy decidedly better prospects for employment than did their predecessors during the past five years. This was revealed in a recent survey of Virginia institutions. It is the consensus throughout the country.

College graduates, during the worst period of the depression, had little to look forward to in the immediate future after they had won their diplomas. The industrial world eyed their qualifications with indifference. In many cases, the wheels of great manufacturing plants had ceased to turn. Commerce was at a low ebb. If the youthful graduate turned to the Federal Government, he was likely to meet with an unfavorable response. He would find that at Washington, politics, and not fitness for public service, generally was the controlling factor in the landing of desirable positions. Later, if the worst came to the worst, he was to learn that the white-collar man was sometimes neglected in the relief program. He belonged to what has been called the "lost generation."

This year the college graduate looks out upon a more promising world. The forces of reconstruction, whether they be artificial or natural, have been steadily at work. Industry is beginning again to move at a swift pace. Trade is looking up. The income of the farmer, whom economists describe as the backbone of the country, has been greatly augmented, a circumstance which stimulates business to a large extent. With increased revenue, the budget-makers are not so firm in the determination to pare school expenditures, reopening a once popular field to the youthful graduate in which to make a living while he pondered a definite course in life. This improved condition is likely to continue for a long time. (Continued on Page Three)

PAYMENT RATES ARE ANNOUNCED

Average Return for Participation in Conservation Movement Set at $8.50.

The county average rate of the Class I or soil-conserving payment for diversion of acreage from the general soil-depleting base to soil-conserving crops under the 1936 Agricultural Conservation Program for Princess Anne county is $8.50 an acre. H. W. Ozlin announced yesterday.

And as has been announced previously, the soil-conserving payment for diversion from the general soil-depleting base for all counties and states throughout the United States will average $10.00 an acre, depending upon the productivity of the land.

The county average rate of this payment is based upon the productivity of crop land in the county as indicated by the average yields of principal soil-depleting crops (other than cotton, tobacco and peanuts) in relation to the United States average yields of these crops.

The rate of the payment on individual farms within the county will vary from the county average rate according to the way the productivity of crop land on the farm varies from the county average productivity. That is, if the land on the farm is more productive than the average in the county, as measured by the yields of the general soil-depleting crops, the rate of payment for diversion from the general soil-depleting base for the farm will be above the county average rate. If the productivity of the farm is below the average of the county, the rate for the farm will be below the county average rate.

Attention is called particularly to the fact that this announcement does not refer to payment for diversion of acreage from the cotton soil-depleting base, the tobacco soil-depleting base, or the peanut soil-depleting base. Rates for those payments on individual farms are calculated from the yields per acre for the farm of cotton, tobacco and peanuts, respectively, as announced when the program was first inaugurated. Those rates are not affected by this announcement.

Consider... CORN

If you are a serious eater, if you have convictions about green-turtle soup being followed by grouse, if you concern yourself with what foods should go in company with fowl—consider corn.

Not only in cold weather when corn fritters link up so deliciously with crisply browned little sausages, and when corn soup is the perfect prelude for a baked ham dinner—consider corn for lighter summer meals also. Consider corn soup with fresh spring lettuce, shredded and sautéed. Consider corn and pea fritters that, look so tempting garnished with cheese sauce, and taste most delicious. Here are directions for making them:

Tested Recipes

Corn and Pea Fritters on Toast: Make a cheese sauce of two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, one and one-half cups milk and one cup grated cheese. Drain one cup of canned whole kernel corn and one 11-ounce can of peas. Sauté a few minutes in two tablespoons butter and then add to the cheese sauce. Season to taste and serve on toast. This serves six persons.

Corn and Lettuce Soup: Sauté one cup shredded lettuce in two tablespoons butter until it starts to brown. Add one cup of canned cream-style corn and cook gently for five minutes more. Add three cups scalded milk to one cup hot mashed potatoes and then add to the corn and season to taste with salt and pepper. Thicken with a little flour mixed with water, if it is desired thicker.

NEW STYLES FOR SCOUTS

BOOKS TO OWN

REPORT OF THE COMPANY
By Dudley Vaill Talcott
Random House, 347 pp. $3.75

A Review by Alfred Buffin McEwen. Instructor in English. University of Virginia.

Romance shines through the pages of Dudley Vaill Talcott's venture into writing, an art alien to that of his first choice. This book is heightened rather than diminished by the prosaic title of his book, "Report of the Company," and by the matter of fact manner of the prose itself. If, as we have often held, the essence of a good book is the accretion of experience, then certainly "Report of the Company" has the primary element. It is the true story of a New England sculptor who bought a Norwegian fishing and sealing vessel with the idea of making her pay for herself. Pay for herself she did in the six years in which her owner and crew took sportsmen on polar bear hunts, captured muskoxen for sport, flesh or hides, fished for herring and salmon on the fringe of the Arctic sea, or more soberly, transported freight.

As is often the case with books of rare charm and fresh vigor, the spirit and texture of "Report of the Company" are difficult things to reproduce in the short space of a review. It is true that the work is enlightening as to modern methods of fishing and hunting in the seas north of Tromsø, Norway. It is true that the artist conveys to us by sketch and photograph (with which the book is generously ornamented) his impressions of the scenery and people of northern latitudes. And it is true, moreover, that the author gives us an excellent report on a business undertaking of considerable economic significance. But more important than any of these aspects is the philosophy of the artist, a carefully recorded narrative of an individual's struggle to understand himself and his position in the world he is to live in.

In common with other true narratives of the sea, the harsher aspects are not slighted. Danger and disaster threaten the good ship Norkap as she scurries through the ice fields, or sails along the icebound coasts of Norway and Greenland. Vicariously, the reader of the book gets the thrill of shooting the walrus, the musk-ox, and the polar bear. He sees millions of herring in a single school, sees the birthplace of great icebergs, and sees himself caught in a heap from which he might never escape, but does. The author modestly states that there is no frontier left upon this machine-ridden planet, but there are plenty of what we less hardy folk would call frontier in "Report of the Company."

The most valuable feature of the work is the entire frankness with which the author discusses topics of universal interest. His interpretation of those finer issues, work, sex and religion, are, though sometimes naive, if one may use this word in connection with so sophisticated an author, are expressed with an originality which must captivate the reader, though it may sometimes shock him.

The style of the book is striking as an example of the heights, of good prose which may be attained by a comparative stranger to the medium, provided, of course, the stranger has some knowledge of art, and has a clear and ready mind. Dudley Vaill Talcott shows the spirit and the alert sensitiveness to his surroundings which constitute the true artist. His prose is the concrete, simple expression of a man who has worked with his hands, and who is familiar with the ordinary objects of daily life. It is free from a certain bookishness which characterizes some of the work of professional writers.

And speaking of those leads us to observe that they might learn a bit about prose writing from this amateur fresh from the ranks of the sculptors. We regard "Report of the Company" as a distinct contribution to contemporary letters. It has a pithiness and body strangely lacking in the works of those novelists who habitually turn out a book a year whether or not they have anything to say. Art without substance, is like love without a corporeal embodiment. And "Report of the Company" can certainly not be accused of any suggestion of the uncorporeal aspects of nature and human life.

As Others See It

The New York Times takes the view that—

If business thrives again, there will be plenty of private jobs for college graduates. If recovery breaks down, we shall have a new economic order ruled from Washington, and that means ever so many more jobs. The job scarcity for the last few years has obviously been, for the young, a transitional state.

So the college graduate this year may receive his diploma with a smile. He will not belong, like his immediate predecessors, to a "lost generation." — Richmond Times-Dispatch.

THE LATER THE BETTER

According to Highway Commissioner Shirley, the Federal-aid road system in Virginia is 90 per cent complete but the Highway Commission has requested a 10 per cent mileage extension, which would add three or four hundred miles to the system. Mr. Shirley is hopeful that this request will be granted.

But a dispatch from Washington quotes Federal officials as saying that if Virginia has constructed 90 per cent of its current Federal-aid system, meeting all requirements, it is entitled to apply for an additional 1 per cent of the completed mileage. This means that Virginia may apply for approximately thirty-nine miles.

While it is doubtful if Virginia will secure Federal funds for the construction of three or four hundred more miles of highway, it is to be hoped the Government will loosen up and let the State have the money. For, as Mr. Shirley points out, inclusion of this extra mileage in the Federal-aid system is important because the State Highway Commission this year has funds for construction only on Federal-aid projects.

This may not mean anything to the Government at Washington but it means much to the Virginia public. It means the construction of three or four hundred miles of road that will not be built without Federal help. Of course the people of Virginia know that, except for Federal funds, work on primary highways has stopped. And of course they know that, soon or late, this flow of funds will cease. This is one time when it might be said the later the better.—Bristol Herald-Courier.

FORD V-8 ECONOMY MEANS HIGH "Dollar Mileage"

(MORE MILES PER DOLLAR)

NO MATTER how you classify your expenditures for car up-keep—It's your total expenditure that counts. How much "dollar mileage" is your car giving you?

Dollars do go farther in the Ford V-8. Modern improved carburetion gives you unusual gasoline mileage with brilliant V-8 performance. Most owners of today's Ford change oil only every 2000 miles and add none between changes.

And after the first few thousand miles you begin to understand what Ford V-8 "dollar mileage" really means.

It gives you more miles per dollar because it gives you all-round economy—low first cost, low up-keep cost, low depreciation and long life—as well as low gasoline and oil consumption. All these are big items if you aim to buy the most economical car.

STRAWBERRY JAM FOR HUNGRY HUSBANDS

BECAUSE of the perfect heat control of the electric range, housewives who have adopted this modern method of cookery have found it especially favorable to the preparation of delicious jams and jellies. The June bride cook shown above has just completed her first batch of strawberry jam, which is going to taste mighty good to her new husband next winter! With the help of her electric range, she transferred a quart of juicy, ripe strawberries into six glasses of jam in the record time of twelve to fifteen minutes. Heat control was required, because four different heat changes are necessary to insure a perfect jam. The Thrift Cooker of the range—the six-quart aluminum cooking vessel fitted into the top of the range—is ideal for the sterilization of the jelly glasses. It aerolizes by steam, eliminating the old boiling water method which often resulted in burned fingers and wasted fuel. The glasses are piled in the Thrift Cooker, covered with only one to two cups of water, and steamed on HIGH heat forty-five minutes to one hour after steam appears from the vent of the Cooker.

CAKE AND KEEPING OF GROOMS

It may be very well for brides To capture all attention With ivory satin and Grand-mother's lace And presents too numerous to mention:

But for every bride there's always a Groom, And immediately after the honey-moon He may develop a useful flavor For making concoctions of flavor most rare.

So give him an apron both sturdy and wide, And encourage his sorties with true wife pride. Though he use every dish and spill grease on the floor, You'll know where he is; now how could you ask more?

R. S.
Lucky the bride the rice falls on! That's what the ancients thought, who started this centuries-old custom of tossing rice at the bride, to bring her happiness. So wedding guests continue to fling rice at the heels of the newlyweds, where it will nestle in the groom's cuff and the bride's hair, to tattle-tales to the hotel clerk.

Much more to the point, according to the brides of former seasons, would be to save the rice to give to the bride after the 'at home' cards have gone out, together with recipes for tossing it, in cooked state, to her new mate. Since the bevelled beauty-of-the-hour scarce has time to collect the 'thrown grains, it's up to her homemaker-friends to tell her how rice, the wedding symbol, can hold in that rude transition from satin sheath to gingham apron.

The six cabins in the Seashore State Park at Cape Henry have been reserved for the first six weeks following the June 15 opening date, R. E. Burson, State Parks Director, reported this week. He told Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the commission on Conservation and Development, that additional cottages could be used to take care of the demands daily made upon his office for accommodations on the Virginia seashore.

The cabins in the park may be reserved for two-week periods with the privilege of renewal if no reservations do not interfere. The park has picnic shelters and outdoor fireplaces for camp cooking, as well as bathing, boating, fishing, and horseback riding facilities.

Contributions Made To Town's Churches

The different churches of Virginia Beach have been the beneficiaries of the charity of L. P. Cummings, proprietor of the Kados Confectionery, during the month of May. On each Sunday of the month a designated denomination received 10 per cent of the day's receipts. No congregation was overlooked.

The Rev. P. P. Brennan, of the Star of the Sea Church, this week acknowledged the gift of Mr. Cummings to his church.

PARTY LEADERS MEET NEXT WEEK

Virginia members of the national committee.

Climbing on the bandwagon

The Price-for-governor bandwagon is being filled with enthusiastic endorsers. It is considered probable that Lieutenant-Governor James H. Price will face a test of strength at the Norfolk conclave in his bid for the gubernatorial chair. Veteran political observers say the State convention will have vital significance for the Price candidacy.

Julius E. West, Suffolk, former lieutenant-governor of Virginia and the only Democrat in the Second District ever nominated for office in a state primary, has come out in support of Price's aspirations. Former Governor Lee Trinkle proclaimed his support for Mr. Price shortly after Mr. Price made it known that he would run.

"I shall support Jim Price for governor," is the way Mr. West phrased his support, "and should opposition develop, I shall begin immediately the organization of Price supporters in this section. From my contacts and reports from all sections of the state, I am satisfied that he is the almost unanimous choice of the Democracy of Virginia, which, I believe, has definitely made up its mind to nominate and elect him as the next governor of Virginia."

Hamilton Supports Price

Another Second District leader, Norman R. Hamilton, Portsmouth publisher, is a staunch supporter of Price's candidacy and has sought to make a political issue of the fact that Representative Darden, his foe in the coming congressional primary, has not made a public commitment relative to the gubernatorial situation. Mr. Hamilton has made a bid for support of his cause from the Price supporters.

In Norfolk last week the Price candidacy received a substantial boost from the recognized Norfolk organization leadership when the Lieutenant-Governor was guest of honor at a private dinner party given by Norfolk's City Treasurer, B. Gray Tunstall. Other guests included the local political leaders in a cozy party that observers value as highly significant both as to the gubernatorial situation and the Congressional contest be-

Keynote Speaker

Congressman Clifton A. Woodrum, of Norfolk, who will deliver the keynote address at the Democratic State Convention in Norfolk next week.

Incumbent Darden and aspirant Hamilton in the Second District.

The day prior to the Tunstall testimonial, Commonwealth's Attorney John M. Arnold of Norfolk publicly proclaimed his support of the Price candidacy. In connection with this, Price, at the Tunstall party said, "I am receiving recruits and if there are any who would like to join Mr. Arnold and the others, I will be glad to open the lists."

In the Third District, where veteran Representative and former Governor Arnold Jackson Montague is being opposed for re-nomination by Dave E. Satterfield, ex-Commonwealth's Attorney, both men have announced publicly their support of Mr. Price's candidacy.

Senator Byrd has not committed himself on the gubernatorial situation, although there are many political prognosticators who believe the Byrd organization is coming around to the view that it will be inexpedient to oppose Mr. Price's aspirations at the 1937 primary.

Candidates File Petitions

With the filing of notices of candidacies last week, races in two of Virginia's congressional districts were assured for the August primary.

In the Second District, Publisher Hamilton, of Portsmouth will seek the congressional toga now worn by Representative Darden. The latter filed his notice of candidacy two weeks ago, the accompanying petition bearing more than 2,000 signatures. In filing his petition, containing some 1,000 names, Mr. Hamilton said he had "thousands of additional signatures to my petition, but think 1,000, or four times the legal requirement, is sufficient."

In his campaign to unseat Representative Montague in the Third District, Dave E. Satterfield, Jr., filed a petition which was claimed to bear the signatures of 9,278 qualified voters. It was announced at the Satterfield headquarters, "we believe it is the largest number of voting names ever attached to a political petition in Virginia." Previously, Representative Montague filed his petition, containing approximately 3,500 signatures.

The battles in the Second and Third districts are expected to grow more bitter and spirited as the date of the primary approaches. Active campaigns have already been waged, strong organizations having been built up for the race down the home stretch.

Other candidates who have qualified in addition to those already mentioned are: Senator Carter Glass; Representatives S. Otis Bland, First District; Patrick Henry Dewey, Fourth District; Thomas G. Burch, Fifth District; Clifton A. Woodrum, Sixth District; A. Willis Robertson, Seventh District; and Howard W. Smith, Eighth District. Representative John W. Flannagan, Ninth District, was nominated by convention and was not required to file notice of candidacy.

SEVERE DROUTH HINDERS FARMER

Widely Scattered Areas of Country Affected by Continuance of Dry Weather.

Severe drouth conditions, centered largely in the Southeast but with other widely scattered areas affected, constituted a serious menace to crops, but retail trade was well sustained over last year's levels, according to nationwide reports to the Department of Commerce last week. Building activity was one of the brightest spots in the business picture, while widespread employment gains were recorded and industrial operations were resisting seasonal declines.

While retail trade continued at the same steady pace of recent weeks in most sections, the holiday and unseasonable weather caused some slowing down in a few cases. For the month of May, gains ranged from 10 to 20% ahead of the 1935 month.

Local Area Drouth-Stricken

North and Middle Georgia crops were suffering from the worst drouth since 1925, according to the Atlanta report and Memphis described a similar condition in Tennessee, parts of Mississippi and Arkansas. Suffering spread over Virginia, Maryland, the Carolinas and Alabama and to a less violent extent in Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Missouri and the Northwest. In the Portland, Oregon area, beneficial rains were timely, but too late for straw berries. Tobacco planting was considerably handicapped in the Louisville district and while the drouth was broken in the Indianapolis region, crops were two weeks late. Wheat was good to excellent in the St. Louis territory, but fruits were scarce. Jacksonville reported the best citrus season in ten years. The spread of drouth conditions occasioned considerable discouragement.

Labor disturbances continued in many sections. 10,000 sawmill and timber workers having been idle in the Portland area, while planing mill workers were on strike in Minneapolis. In Los Angeles, there was an acute shortage of skilled labor in building and manufacturing, but a surplus of unskilled. A survey in the Cleveland area showed industrial employment in May the highest since 1930 with several firms expecting to increase their personnel in June. In Nashville, more workers were employed in industry than in 1929, according to the Memphis report. During the week 10,500 persons were dropped from the relief rolls in Pennsylvania and 61% were absorbed by private industry. Industrial employment in Springfield, Mass., was at the 1929 peak, while a survey by the Illinois Manufacturers Association of Chicago showed manufacturing enterprises in Illinois employing more than in 1929.

Steel Orders Increase

The Detroit industrial index receded slightly because of the holiday, but the index stood at 103 compared with 102.4 a year ago. Pittsburgh steel mills received final orders for 1936 model cars, but structural steel awards increased over the previous week and there was a gain in the window glass demand. Activity in the Cincinnati metal trades was steady, but factory shipments of shoes were ahead of last year. Continued improvement prevailed in the Buffalo heavy industries with steel plants operating at 76% of capacity, compared with 33% last May. The establishment of several new plants was reported by Philadelphia and Los Angeles. A $400,000 packing plant was being erected at Albany, Ga.

Louisville reported an order by the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad for $11,925,000 of new equipment. Flour production in Minneapolis dropped to 38% of capacity, the slowest week of the year in the milling business.

For the second consecutive month of the year, shipping through the port of Philadelphia set an all-time high record. Machine tool orders in April reached the highest level of the year. The Federal Reserve Board announced aggregate bank deposits of this country at $48,964,000,000 at the end of 1935, a gain of more than four billion dollars over the previous year.

GOOD QUALITY ROUGHAGE FEEDING HELD CHEAP MILK PRODUCTION AID

The liberal feeding of good quality roughage such as legume hays, corn silage, and pasture, is one of the first essentials of economical milk production. Experience has demonstrated that the greatest net profit from the production of milk comes to those dairymen who are careful to provide all the good quality roughage their herds can consume. In fact, without first class hay, silage and pasture, unduly large amounts of expensive grain and purchased concentrates must be fed to secure satisfactory milk production.

Prolonged dry weather has created a roughage problem for most Virginia dairymen. The yield of clover hay is seriously affected, and the first cutting of alfalfa is considerably less than the first cutting in 1935. In some instances the dairymen's anxiety to get the maximum roughage yield per acre has caused still further loss, due to over-ripeness and loss of leaves in harvesting the hay crop. This loss in nutritive material must eventually be restored by the feeding of supplemental grain concentrates if a satisfactory level of production is to be maintained.

Late Cutting Unwise

The stage at which grasses and legumes are cut for hay influences the composition, digestibility and ease of curing the hay. As forage plants approach maturity, the percentage of digestible protein and carbohydrates diminishes and the percentage of less easily digested crude fiber increases. The late cutting of hay not only causes an actual loss of protein but the hay becomes less palatable and less digestible. Because of too late cutting the quality of many excellent crops of hay are sacrificed. Even though weather conditions may be perfect, it is impossible to produce good quality hay from late cut grass and legume crops.

The important quality factors in sound hay are leafiness and green color. Therefore, late cut hay which has lost some of its green color or leaves before cutting, cannot lose any more leaves or color in the curing process without becoming medium or low grade hay. Most of the minerals and digestible protein of legume plants are found in the leaves, consequently the loss of leaves greatly reduces the feeding value of the hay.

Color Indicates Appeal

The presence of rich green color, indicates, among other things, that the hay is palatable, free from weather or storage damage, and contains a high carotene content. The vitamin A potency of milk and milk products depends on the amount of carotene in the feed. The decided and continuous lack of carotene in the feed interferes with normal reproduction and growth of livestock.

Many farmers delay cutting such crops as soybeans and cowpeas until the seed is mature, expecting to get the greatest yield of hay per acre, or to make both hay and grain from the same crop. This practice falls far short of the objective because when the plant is old enough to have matured a crop of grain the plant stems are tough and woody and a large percentage of the lower leaves dry and fall off before the plants are cut. It is best to cut soybeans when the lower leaves start to turn yellow and the pods are half filled. If the maximum yield of digestible nutrients is to be expected from the crop.

The proper stage for cutting the different forage crops for the most nutritive hay varies in some sections of the country. Generally, however, alfalfa should be cut when from one-tenth to one-fourth in bloom, or when the first basal shoots appear; soybeans when the lower leaves start to turn yellow and the pods are half filled; lespedeza when in full bloom; cowpeas when the first pods begin to turn yellow with maturity, but before any of the pods start to shatter their seed when handled; red clover from half to full bloom; mixed oats and vetch when the oats are in the milk stage; oats and wheat when the grain is in the milk stage, and timothy from early to full bloom.

When sufficient good quality hay is available, the question arises as to what is the most profitable amount of concentrates to feed. The answer to this question, insofar as Virginia dairymen are concerned, will depend upon the productive capacity of the cows, on the relative cost of the nutrients in the roughage and in the concentrates, and on the price received for the milk. If the cows are inherently high milk producers, then they will be able to return more net profit to the dairyman for his hay and will respond better to grain feeding than cows lacking in natural milk producing ability. Good roughage is the key that will unlock one of the doors to greater profits for Virginia dairymen.

SURPRISING NEW USES ARE BEING FOUND FOR BEAN THAT MAY BECOME MAJOR CROP

High hopes for the future of the soybean industry are expressed by farm and government experts. They point to the 39 million bushel crop of last year, which netted farmers nearly 30 million dollars, and assert this is but a fraction of future yearly income if the government will give American growers needed protection against competing foreign products now pouring into this country. They visualize soybeans as a future major crop.

Some recent years have seen substantial exports to European countries from America. One government expert declares if Europe could depend upon regular supplies, it would provide a good regular outlet for part of our crop. Farmers in this country who have begun feeding soybean oilmeal to hogs, dairy cows, sheep and poultry are benefitting financially because of its superior value. Feeding of whole beans is frowned upon because excessive oil content tends to create Stars and featured players in "Show Boat" are Irene Dunne, Allan Jones, Helen Morgan, Helen Westley, Charles Winninger and Paul Robeson.

By popular request, the Bayne Theatre presents a return run of Victor Herbert's classic operetta, "Naughty Marietta," featuring Jeanette MacDonald, one of the greatest singing stars of the American screen, and Nelson Eddy, American operatic baritone. This musical romance will be shown on Tuesday, June 16. "I Married A Doctor," Warner Bros. picture from Sinclair Lewis' novel, is scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday, June 17 and 18. While real estate as a subject of conversation on the streets of Virginia Beach, is still supreme, there is another subject which at this time is running it a close second—fish, honest to goodness fresh fish are beginning to make their appearance in the old Atlantic at Virginia Beach, and their arrival is being welcomed with great joy by those—and there are quite a few at Virginia Beach—who operate fish ponds. To be sure they are not coming in any great quantities as yet, but sufficient had been taken this week to make their presence felt at Virginia Beach, and packers here say that they are looking for croakers by the end of the week, then the interest will be really acute, as Mr. Croaker furnishes the largest fish traffic of any species caught along the coast during the spring.

Salt-Water Fishing in Virginia

The key to successful sport fishing in the Virginia waters is to find an excellent guide, with good boat, for most of the fishing grounds in the state are so extensive that if one spot fails to produce fish, the guide will know of a dozen others within a short distance which can be depended upon.

A good guide will be familiar with the fishing grounds in his home waters, the kind of bait and tackle you should use and generally has fishing tackle to loan as part of the cost of the trip. Some guides furnish bait, others charge for it. In bluefishing the price generally includes the "chum" and bait. Along the Virginia rivers, the Chesapeake, Rappahannock, and York, it is generally the custom to buy peeler crabs for bait. They are generally available from a local dealer.

The types of boats used in Virginia are the same as used in oystering and commercial fishing.

Thinking Your Way To The Top

MANY of the country's most successful business men have the habit of leaving their offices early in the day. Sometimes this is mistakenly looked upon as loafing on the job, when the truth of the matter is that they really begin to do their most effective work only after they have left their offices. The work that makes them outstanding in their field is done when they go into conference with themselves, review their day's work, and plan for the next day. Trace back any successful action to its early stages, and you will find that practically always it followed the formulation of a well considered plan. A man notable for his success as a salesman used to say that his sales were really made before he even called on the prospect. He had made such a complete study of the prospect's needs and had worked out such a sound plan of approach that the sale was almost a foregone conclusion. Regardless of the business you choose you should realize that your success will depend very largely on your ability to "out-think" the men who are competing with you for recognition and advancement. A good man does not work only when he is at his desk. He is thinking long before he can cope with a ticklish situation or solve a pressing problem, while he is playing golf, digging in his garden or pursuing any other form of recreation that he enjoys. Whatever the height of your ambitions or the strength of your faith, your ability to get to the top is going to be determined by your ability to think your way to that eminence.

Article On Beach In 'Commonwealth'

Virginia's recreation capital, Virginia Beach, this year has seen the addition of 100 summer homes and expects to see the greatest season in its history. Don T. Seiwel, managing director of its chamber of commerce, writes this week in "The Commonwealth," publication of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

"No single feature of the past decade's development is as significant as this residential development, annually luring to Virginia Beach an increasing number of families from all sections of the United States," Mr. Seiwel writes. "What once was a bare expanse of sand dunes and pine-bleak as the usual seaside country, today is developing into a garden spot, with commodious and tasteful homes resting in lawns and gardens which speak of painstaking attention bestowed upon them by their owners."

"It was not so many years ago that Virginia Beach was patronized almost exclusively by Virginians and nearby Carolinians. Today its fame has spread into all corners of the United States and Canada."

New tennis courts, improvement to golf courses, addition of many miles of horseback trail, opening of Seashore State Park nearby, and other public improvements are listed as added assets for the vacationist.

BEACH CHAMBER PLANS CAMPAIGN

It was pointed out, this week, will depend in large measure upon the cooperation given to the office by hotel and business interests operating here. The funds sought represent the lowest amount necessary for the development of a publicity service of adequate size, and full returns have been guaranteed for every dollar spent.

To Erect Markers
In addition to the information office and the news and pictorial services, the directors plan to erect markers on all of the prominent highways leading into Virginia and to feature general resort advertising in a selected list of eastern and midwestern newspapers. To date, because of a scarcity of funds, emphasis has been directed away from the advertising plans and on the promotional services.

During the course of the membership campaign, which is expected to consume two weeks, lists of the accepted memberships will be published in the Virginia Beach News. It is the hope of the organization that a speedy campaign will produce the required funds and so permit the enactment of a definite program for the present season.

News photographers are now operating on the beach on Tuesdays, Saturdays and Sundays, and hotels and cottages housing guests of social or business importance in their home communities have been requested to communicate such information to the Chamber of Commerce office. Wherever practical, it was stated, photographs will be taken and sent to the newspapers in the home communities for publication.

Timely Reminders Given in Almanac

Timely suggestions for profitable spare time activities during June are contained in the Ford Farm Almanac and Facts Book under the heading "Reminders."

According to the Almanac this is a good time to clean and disinfect the granary, get haymaking equipment in order, transplant flowers; spray roses, can Hubbard; and do everything possible in preparation for harvesting.

The Almanac also contains historical data for the month, listing an historic event for each day. Among the events listed are the world's first balloon ascension on June 5, 1783; the organization of the Y. M. C. A. on June 6, 1844; the landing of the Dutch on Manhattan Island on June 10, 1610; the Battle of Bunker Hill on June 17, 1775; and the signing of the treaty of Versailles on June 28, 1919. The Ford Motor Company was incorporated on June 16, 1903, the Almanac states.

Full moon this month occurs on the 4th, the last quarter on the 12th, the new moon on the 18th and the first quarter on the 26th, according to the Almanac.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGES MADE

Two Drivers of Cars in Fatal Accident on Laskin Road to Face Court.

Charges of involuntary manslaughter growing out of the automobile collision last Sunday night on the Laskin Boulevard, in which Roland Evans, 21, of Virginia Beach, lost his life will be brought against the two drivers figuring in the accident in the Trial Justice's court at London Bridge on June 29. The warrants were issued upon the request of State Police Officer W. W. Blythe, who investigated the accident.

Bernard Belden, enlisted man attached to the 96th Bombardment Squadron at Langley Field and Roger Malbon, 18, of London Bridge, are the drivers named in the warrants. Malbon is now a patient in St. Vincent's Hospital, where his condition was reported as not serious. Belden was uninjured, as were the other four occupants of the car, all from Richmond.

Miss Ruth Butt, 16, of Nimmo, and her sister Louise, 18, suffered lacerations and bruises about the head and body. Both were detained in the hospital for further observation.

Malbon, with Evans, the Butt sisters and Julian Newburn, 19, of Oceana, as passengers, according to the story told to police investigators, was driving across the boulevard towards Oceana, at Bonney's Corner, when the Belden automobile, enroute to Norfolk from Virginia Beach, struck his machine on the side. Newburn was the only occupant of the truck car to escape injuries. Young Evans died several hours after the accident.

upon them, Mr. Ozlin stated this week that while the berry crop was far below a normal yield, other vegetables and grains were in better condition than in many parts of the country. The potato crop, he said, was definitely spotty, with some fields in excellent condition and others very poor. A harvest of about 80 per cent of a normal yield is anticipated by the growers.

Although the rain of last week was of tremendous value to crops now in the ground, added rain is needed for new plantings of soy beans, sweet potatoes and similar produce. Corn, for the most part, has been unhurt by the continued dry weather.

FUND CAMPAIGN FOR NEEDED AID INAUGURATED BY BEACH CHAMBER

Early Mails Bring First Seven Names to Chamber of Commerce Honor Roll.

NEED FOR SUPPORT IS EMPHASIZED BY BOARD

Local Office Busy Answering Inquiries on Accommodations and Facilities.

With membership application blanks totalling some $5,000 placed in the mails this week by the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce, the campaign for funds to publicize Virginia Beach during the current season got under way. Early return mails brought in an initial subscription of $345, entitling seven firms doing business locally to a place on the Chamber of Commerce Honor Roll.

These firms and the amounts subscribed are as follows: Pine-wood Hotel, $150; D. Fender Grocery Company, $100; Chris Schneider's, $25; Nippon Gift Shop, $20; Virginia Ferry Corporation, $25; Page and Dune, $10; and Greenwood Cottage, $25.

First firms on the Beach to contribute were Schneider's and the Nippon Gift Shop.

Need for Funds Emphasized

Emphasizing that an immediate need for funds existed, directors of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday appealed to all business and hotel interests to fill out the campaign application received and to return them promptly to the local office. The scope of the promotion program for this year, it was stated, will depend entirely upon the total amount received, and this is the time when the greatest effort should be expended on the publicity program.

Membership applications have been mailed to all hotels and cottages, to local businesses and to those firms in Norfolk doing a volume of business on the Beach and to all professional men. Individual memberships from town residents will be sought during the coming week.

Office Is Busy

More than 1,000 inquiries regarding hotel and cottage rates have been received in the information office during the past month, it was learned, and to all of these individuals replies have been mailed. A steady flow of visitors into the office has resulted in the locating of many guests in local hotels, and innumerable inquiries regarding cottage rentals by week, month or season have been referred directly to the real

State Bankers Meet at Cavalier Hotel in 43 Annual Convention

Col. Sinclair Brown, President of Virginia Group, Presides Over Meeting; Prominent Speakers, Are Featured on Interesting 2-Day Program.

Meeting in their forty-third annual convention, members of the Virginia Bankers Association yesterday opened their yearly session at the Cavalier Hotel, with Colonel J. Sinclair Brown, former speaker of the Virginia House of Delegates, presiding.

Topics of paramount importance to bankers, including the new Virginia banking legislation, the problems created by unemployed funds and customer relations, have been given chief place on the program, with the major discussions set for today. Yesterday, the featured speaker was Charles P. Blinn, Jr., vice president of the Philadelphia National Bank, who spoke on the subject, "The Practical Problem of Unemployed Funds." He was followed by Charles H. McComas, manager and attorney of the Fidelity and Deposit Company, of Baltimore, who discussed "Business Relationships Between Banks and Surety Companies."

Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, who had been slated as the featured speaker at the convention, was forced to cancel his engagement early this week because of an accident. His inability to attend the annual conference was openly regretted by many of the delegates.

Today, Lewis F. Gordon, director of public relations of the Citizens and Southern National Bank of Atlanta, will conduct a clinic on public and customer relations. Charles L. Kaufman, Norfolk attorney, and Jesse F. Wood, vice president of the State Planters Bank and Trust Company, of Richmond, are other speakers.

Virginia members of the American Bankers Association will elect a State vice president, a member of the general nominating committee, an alternate member of the nominating committee and State vice presidents of the divisions of trusts, national bank, State bank and savings bank at a meeting to be held today following the session of the convention proper.

CANNING PRIZES FOR 4-H GIRLS

Eighth Annual Contest Is Sponsored by Committee on Youths' Club Work.

Girls enrolled in 4-H canning projects are again offered select prizes for superior records, announces the National Committee on Boys and Girls Club Work of Chicago. The awards which are provided in the 8th National 4-H Canning Contest by the Kerr Glass Corporation comprise gold medals for county winners, chapereau educational trips to the next National Club Congress, state champions, and three college scholarships of $500, $200 and $100 to national winners.

To compete, a 4-H canner is required to fill in a standard report form available from local leaders or county extension agents giving a record of her canning experience. She should show the number of exhibits made and prizes won, demonstration and judging contests entered, the assistance given to other canning girls and housewives, and any awards or recognitions she has received.

Contestants are not required to enter any of their products or pay a fee of any kind. County and state winners are to be chosen by extension agents late this summer on the basis of their reports and national winners will be chosen in November by a committee of nationally known 4-H leaders.

Forty-one states participated in the contest last year, in which Isabel Travis, age 17, of Sun River, Montana, won national honors on a 4 year canning record in which she put up 3720 pints of foods. Julia Menek, 19, of Clintonville, Conn., won a $200 scholarship on 3225 pints canned in 7 years, and Lois Carr, 17, of Goodard, Kan., a $100 scholarship on 2000 pints.

WPA TO REVIEW FUTURE PROGRAM

All W. P. A. workers in Virginia, their friends and families, and public officials and sponsors of projects were invited on Tuesday by William A. Smith, State Administrator, to participate in a nation-wide radio W. P. A. staff conference to be broadcast from Washington Saturday, from 4:00 to 4:30 p. m., Eastern Standard time. ## TOURIST LAYOUT WILL EMPHASIZE HOTEL COMFORTS

First Unit of Twenty Cottages Now Taking Shape on Atlantic Avenue.

Elaborate Landscaping Is Planned.

Emphasizing the tourist cottage as the ideal vacation setup for the average American family, W. S. Boswell, of San Diego, Cal., a former resident of Norfolk, this week closed a deal for the construction of an approximate 20 such cottages on the half-block of land fronting on Thirtieth Street and extending from Atlantic to Pacific Avenue. At least ten of these cottages will be ready for occupancy on or near July 4.

The type of cottage now under construction is for two-family tenancy, each equipped with bedroom and modern bath. The cottages will be erected next spring, fronting on Atlantic Avenue. The cottages which will face on Thirtieth Street will be built with living room and kitchenette as well as bedroom and bath, and will be completely furnished. The kitchens will be electrically equipped with the fixtures built into the walls.

Should such a plan appear feasible, a central heating plant will be constructed later in the year, making the cottages suitable for all-year tenancy. The completed layout will be known as Atlantic Avenue Court.

Landscaping Planned

Although little landscaping is planned for this season, Mr. Boswell emphasized that the whole location would blossom forth next spring as a thing of great beauty and attraction, as well as a credit to the town. Other similar layouts are now being planned for future construction here by Mr. Boswell.

CHARITY JACKETS CONTINUE WINS

Seventeenth and Eighteenth Victories Hung Up Over Weekend by Team.

Turning in their seventeenth and eighteenth wins for the season out of nineteen games played, Charity's Red Jackets last week-end continued their victorious march to Tidewater championship honors by defeating the Ocean View nine on Saturday and the Dockers Corner team on Sunday. Both contests, although marred by a plenitude of errors, were on decisively by the home team.

On Saturday, Ocean View was repulsed by the score of 8-5, charity began the scoring in the third inning with a single run, adding six more tallies in the sixth and a final corner in the eighth inning. In all, the local team collected 12 hits and was charged with two errors. Self and Harrell formed the battery for the victors, the former allowing the visitors nine hits.

Eckert Hits Home Run

Ocean View collected its five runs in the seventh and eighth innings, with four tallies recorded in the seventh. Eckert, who hurled for the team, was credited with a home run. Smith, M. Lovitt and Waterman collected four-base hits for the Red Jackets.

Sunday's game with Dockers Corner resulted in an 8-4 victory for the home team, with Hauns (Continued on Page Eight)

Jack Dempsey to Open Boxing Season At Arena Wednesday

Opens Here Tonight

An all-star boxing card developed by Jack Dempsey and over which the former heavyweight champion will preside will open the newly renovated and enlarged Cavalier-Kennel Club, located on the western end of Twenty-fourth Street, next Wednesday night, according to an announcement made this week by the officers of the Sports Events Corporation, lessees of the track property. Officers and stockholders of the corporation are all local men. It was stated in the announcement.

To Feature Racing

Although plans for the entire summer season have not been completed, it was learned that boxing, wrestling and miniature automobile racing will be featured on the popular track property during the afternoons and nights of the summer season. Other sports events also planned with a horse show and a good circus probable bookings.

To facilitate the miniature automobile racing, the track has been enlarged and graded. This novel form of entertainment, also popular in certain sections of the country as dog-racing, will be featured on afternoons and evenings, with a thrill a minute promised the spectators. The miniature cars, which reach a speed of 100 miles per hour, are tricky (Continued on Page Five)

NEGRO SERVICES ARE CONTINUED

Colored Help of Hotels and Cottages Invited to Methodist Church.

The special Sunday evening services planned for the white churches of Virginia Beach will be continued through this coming Sunday night, when the Methodist Church will be opened to the colored help now working in cottages and hotels. It was announced this week by the Ministerial Association, sponsors of the project. The service will begin at 9:30 o'clock, with the Rev. L. W. Meachum scheduled to preach.

The series was inaugurated in the Presbyterian Church last Sunday. At first, plans were announced to utilize the four churches of the community on alternating Sunday nights, but it is now regarded as likely that, should the services be continued, the Baptist Tabernacle on Seventeenth Street, or some other suitable building, will be the locale of the meetings.

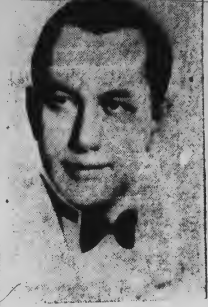

Hotel and cottage operators have been asked to cooperate with the sponsors of the union service and to encourage their help to attend. Need for such a service has been felt during past years, and its scheduling for this season comes as a result of conferences held by the members of the Virginia Beach Ministerial Association.

The offerings taken at each service will be turned over to the local Community Fund for relief work among Negroes.

SPECHT WAS LEADER IN MOVEMENT TO ESTABLISH FINE ARTS BUREAU

Paul Specht, who will open with his orchestra at the Village Barn tonight, is regarded in musical circles as one of the outstanding conductors of jazz orchestras in the country. Great as is his fame in this field, he has come into even wider prominence in recent years because of his activity in Washington to have established by the Federal Government a Department of Fine Arts.

Pointing out that this, the richest country in the world, is the only one to overlook the cultural advantages of a distinctive native art and the development of talented musicians, artists and writers unable to provide the costs of their further training in the artistic circles of Europe, Mr. Specht this

CLUB OPENINGS SET FOR TONIGHT

Village Barn and Crystal Club Are Latest Newcomers to Entertainment Field.

Night club openings of note scheduled for tonight include the Village Barn and the Crystal Club, both under managements new to Virginia Beach.

Down at the Village Barn, located in the club building of the New Casino, everything is in readiness for a gala opening, according to J. E. Rose, general manager of the Beach's newest recreation center. Paul Specht and his orchestra, direct from the Club Medinah, in Chicago, will provide the music for dancing and the floor presentation, featuring Jay Hill, late of Benny Meroff's band, as master of ceremonies and starring the vocalizations of Red Evans and Lela Brady.

Floor Show Announced

The floor show which will participate in the Village Barn's formal opening includes Armand and Julianne, a ballroom team of extraordinary dancers, who are coming here from the Billmore Bowl, in Los Angeles; Beth Talbot, a singer of sophisticated songs; Natalie and Marie, a sister team of outstanding reputation, and Fay Moss, billed as an acrobatic dancer. With the exception of Armand and Julianne, the entire show will come from an early summer engagement at the Vanity Fair, in Chicago.

The decorative treatment of the Village Barn is patterned closely upon the more successful clubs of similar design throughout the north and middle west. The old carriages displayed last year, in the Club Tallyho remain intact, with a roster, emblem of the new club, the chief theme of the wall and light treatment. Extensive renovations have been made in the lighting and seating arrangements.

Cafe Opens Today

The Village Barn SideWalk Cafe, an open-air restaurant on the ocean front, will be run in conjunction with the club, under the direction of Frank R. Abbo, manager. (Continued on Page Eight)

$33,100 BONUS BONDS CERTIFIED FOR PAYMENT IN VIRGINIA BEACH

Only Half of Quota Sent Into Community Returned for Immediate Payment.

Most of Veterans Questioned to Use Money for Old Debts or New Homes.

Veterans residing in and near Virginia Beach this week had certified bonus bonds of an aggregate total of $33,100, plus an unknown amount paid by check for odd amounts below $50. W. P. Ashburn, local postmaster, reported yesterday. This amount was the share due to 69 of the 140 veterans now making their homes in this community.

The 71 veterans who have not yet certified their bonds for payment will swell the total to an estimated $75,000. It was reported, out of a probable total of $500,000 to be collected throughout the entire county by the approximate 1,000 veterans residing here. The estimated total of veterans, plus the amount they will receive, was figured by the local American Legion post some months ago.

Checks Come From Richmond

Those who will turn in their bonds for immediate cash payment will have their checks forwarded from Richmond, the closest office to the Beach where such checks are drawn. It is expected that the majority of the bonds which arrived in the local postoffice this week will be certified for payment immediately.

In order to facilitate handing of the bonus bonds, Postmaster Ashburn held his force at the postoffice on Monday until 9 P. M. In regard to questions raised at them relative to the use to which the cash will be put, the majority of veterans stated that they will pay back debts, purchase homes or place the money in savings accounts. As the week progressed, it was reported that a big demand was noted for electrical equipment and household furnishings by veterans, and a definite stimulus was given to the automobile industry. ## APPEAL IS MADE BY SANITARIUM

Annual Balloon Day to Be Sponsored on July 4 by Local Charity.

The Virginia Beach Infant Sanitarium will hold its annual Balloon Day on Saturday, July 4, on the streets of Virginia Beach, at which time funds will be solicited for the continuance of the institution which has brought health and happiness to an vast number of underprivileged children from Norfolk and Portsmouth cities and the counties of Norfolk and Princess Anne.

The work of the Infant Sanitarium, during the many years of its existence, has brought unusual credit to its sponsors from visitors who have come here from all sections of the United States. Providing the means of a carefree vacation at the water's edge and an opportunity to regain the status of good health which is the prerogative of all children, it has been a vital factor in maintaining high health standards among the underprivileged children of this and adjacent communities.

Operated solely with the contributions received from the general public, the sanitarium has been taxed in recent years to take care of the increasing number of children seeking admission, and it is expected that this country's demand will be as large as ever before. Continuation of the excellent service given in past years will depend, the officials point out, upon the support of the public to its plea for funds.

Visitors and residents are urged to support this most worthy charity.

"THE VOICE of a majority, swaying the course of government does not insure good government except it be the voice of a well-informed and well-intentioned people."

THE CONVENTIONS

The Republican Convention of 1936 is now history. A platform has been presented to the American people; a presidential candidate has been elected to lead the party either to victory or defeat. Whether a wise selection of leadership has been effected remains to be seen.

The platform as promulgated, for better or for worse, depends upon its reception by one hundred and twenty-five millions of people, spread over 3,000,000 square miles of territory, with diverging interests, differing conditions and cosmopolitan thought. Its declaration of principles will please some and displease others.

For our point of view, the platform was anything else than a firm, positive presentation of sound principles. It would seem that the main purpose was to be all things to all men. Its preamble was an indictment of the "New Deal" and it seems to us, that it was not only justified but susceptible of proof. Reading it alone, one would naturally expect it to be followed by a strong, outspoken declaration of principles and definite pledges to remedy the things of which it complains; instead, it reads to us like an attempt to straddle, to cater to the socialistic West and to hold the conservatives of the East. It proposes to curb bureaucratic rule, reduce the cost of government and balance the budget. At the same time, it will continue the "New Deal" program of spending for relief, farm aid, soil erosion and labor standards.

It cannot do both, therefore, we need not expect a popular uprising in support of a party so manifestly wanting in statesmanship or the moral courage to assert it. In short, the platform is disappointing to some who looked for better things. We commend it, however, for its stand with respect to the Supreme Court.

The 1936 Virginia State Democratic Convention is also a matter of history. To all appearances, it was a harmonious gathering of the party leaders. Excepting the disturbances in the delegations from the Second and Ninth Districts, not unusual in any party convention, its proceedings were carried through as scheduled and without friction, the only exception being the Price demonstration.

Perhaps this may not have had a place on the program, but local leaders from every part of the State staged an ovation to Jim Price which without doubt reflected the overwhelming sentiment of the rank and file of Virginia voters. This may not have been a very palatable pill to the "Boss." If not, he was discreet enough to swallow the pill without a visible frown and Price was given a place in the National Convention as one of the delegates at large.

It may all have been planned in advance, so far as we know, by the directing hand of the State political head. Should this prove to be the case, we are of the opinion that thousands of Virginia voters, now enthusiastic supporters

ers of Price, would have their ardor considerably cooled if they did not actually have chills.

Another feature of the convention, of which thousands will take note, is that both our senior and junior senators, who have been outstanding critics and opponents of many "New Deal" measures, which have been held by the Supreme Court as unlawful, joined with an unanimous demand for the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt for president at the Philadelphia Convention. We shall not criticize them for this apparent inconsistency. Indeed, we cannot say that it is an inconsistency, for compromise of opinion in any political order, or any other order for that matter, are essential to successful results. It may not mean, nor do we think it does mean, that either senator has compromised his principles. By surrendering to the apparent will of their constituents they will retain a position to oppose, in the future, policies inimical to the wellbeing of the nation.

It is an anomalous situation, however, in which we view the record of Senator Byrd. Governor Byrd increased the cost of government immensely, added greatly to the number of State employees, rewrote our State Constitution and did it by illegal processes—processes directly opposed to the plain mandates of the Constitution. Thus he was enabled to centralize government in the State and in the hands of the Governor, which makes it well-nigh impossible to defeat his political machine. The public sanctioned Mr. Byrd's acts at the time, but after twelve years a reaction has taken place which is reflected in the Price popularity.

Mr. Roosevelt has increased the cost of our national government enormously, added hundreds of thousands to the government payroll, ignored and attempted to override Constitutional guarantees and has created a machine that will be hard to defeat. There is this difference in the policies of the two men. Byrd issued no bonds and kept our budget balanced. Roosevelt has kept an unbalanced budget, treble unbalanced, and has issued billions in bonds, which he has indirectly purchased a large part of the electorate, yet he like Byrd at the expiration of his first four years is exceedingly popular. Will it require twelve years for the American people to discover that which Virginians seemed after twelve years to discover, viz: a Dictator?

AN AUSPICIOUS EARLY SEASON

From the Club "500" on the north to the Village Barn on the south, to take in the territory covered by beach and night clubs, there is a bustle of activity, the like of which never has been seen or heard in the Virginia Beach area. The thought that too many places of night entertainment are catering to the seasonal visitors falls to find any substance of belief in the contemplation of the early season crowds now flocking to each place of amusement, and to each place of amusement, to the general anticipation of a record-breaking summer is substantiated by a comparison with the activity of other years for the month of June.

What is true of night clubs is equally true of hotels and cottages. Not alone is business running way ahead of all previous years, but the continued influx of reservations for rapidly dwindling accommodations bespeaks a degree of seasonal tenacity in which the "SRO" sign will be prominently displayed. Once again, to make further use of our north and south extremes, the Princess Pat and the Pinewood Inn with all other hotels and cottages in reporting capacity houses at this usually slack season of the year. Even more heartening to those who pin their faith upon Virginia Beach as the coming resort of the Atlantic coastal country is the evidence of continued development to be witnessed on every hand. Here, we believe, is the finest assurance of progressive development to be had, for that resort well blessed with homes is certain to find hotel accommodations keeping step with private building. The home, in spite of all that might be written to the contrary, is still the center of the community and the indicator of its rate of progress.

There is little doubt that an auspicious season lies immediately ahead. The Beach has discarded for all time the short pants of purely sectional importance and now stands ready and prepared to handle the throngs of visitors and home-makers from all parts of the country that are planning to celebrate this community's "coming of age." We salute Virginia Beach and its unrivaled tourist facilities upon this, the eve of its greatest period of substantial development.

A NOTE OF WARNING TO OUR VISITORS

With the summer season about to swing into its normal stride, we would address a word of timely warning to those vacationists who regard it as a lark to mix alcohol and swimming. They do not, frankly, mix, and he who attempts to flaunt the laws of sanity does no more than expose himself to the possibilities of drowning.

Here at Virginia Beach, where the tragedy of drowning is little known, the visitor often is inclined to forget the dangers that lurk in the restless sea and to test the powers of his endurance while under the influence of spirits. Often, we admit, the temptation to do so is a strong one, but he who would return to his home in good health and in full possession of his faculties will resist such temptation and will, instead, work off his surplus energy on the safer and saner grounds provided by the night clubs.

Having no patience with the ardent prohibitionists, we fail to visualize strong drink as the root of all evil, but we do know that the boundless space beyond the first line of breakers is no place for one who has imbibed too freely of the juice of grape or grain. The old maxim that a power stronger than mortals takes care of fools and drunks is a good one to repeat when one has gained the protection of his home, but to tempt the fates by cutting a direct course to China while bleary-eyed and incoherent can spell little more than disaster.

Play safe this summer and stay out of the water while drinking. Drowning is a mighty unpleasant experience, both for the lad who is the chief actor in the tragedy and for those to whom word of the disaster is first broadcast.

DOG OWNERS COMPLAIN

Editor, Virginia Beach News.

Dear Sir: We were warned through your columns that should we allow our dogs to run loose they would be liable to be taken up and we should be liable to a fine. So I am writing you to ask if it is a joke or are we really to "take it seriously?" Pending new knowledge on the subject, I am abiding strictly by the knowledge I have at hand.

In the meantime, my dog is making the welkin ring and I am faced with my neighbors having me up for harboring a nuisance. Were it not that we are all in the same boat—as all have dogs—and they are variously protesting with loud acclamation, I should be much worried. However, what of me matter? We only live here a few around pay taxes, including dog taxes, patronize the grocers, bakers and candlestick makers, railroads and buses and public carriers, not for three months, but for all the year. Besides, we have elected the councilmen.

Frankly, my six voters never would have cast a vote for one of them if I had known they would perpetrate such a law.

Considering only the people who are here for such a short time, who pay no taxes and who are only here for fun, we are neighborly enough to be willing to have any ordinance that will help our neighbors in their business, but I do not believe for a minute that this ordinance will help them.

There are numbers of people who bring their dogs with them and board them where they board. I would suggest that so long as this ordinance lasts that hotels and boarding houses erect and advertise that they have quarters where dogs may be kept up for the three months they are staying here.

Thanking you for space in your paper, I am,

Yours very sincerely,

My Dog's Friend and Master P. S. Councilmen! Don't be ridiculous.

Editor's Note: There is no joke about the ordinance referred to in the above letter. Dogs found wandering about the Town limits will be apprehended and locked up. They may be retrieved only upon the payment of a stated fine, which increases with each default.

By DON SEIWEL

STEPCHILD OF THE STATE

An editorial appearing in Monday's edition of the Richmond News Leader—in which the glories of Virginia as a vacationland were outlined without the slightest reference to Virginia Beach—adds to our oft-repeated charge that the Beach is indeed the stepchild of the State and of its institutions. The Beach and its environs may annually bring more tourists and vacationists into the Old Dominion than the much publicized Shenandoah Valley and Skyline Drive, but most of the agencies charged with State promotion seem hardly to be doing anything to exist, handling it much as one would all reference to a prodigal son.

The State Commission on Conservation and Development, as an interesting example, spends a good many thousands of dollars each year of the taxpayers' funds on general State promotion. Tide-water Virginia pays its just proportion of those taxes, yet the beach facilities existing here, admittedly among the finest in the land, fail to receive anything like an adequate representation in the published advertisements. Yorktown, Jamestown and Williamsburg are not forgotten, but the emphasis lies on the Shenandoah Valley—which the reader must visualize as a place of commercialized caverns and boarded-up natural wonders—and upon the newly opening Skyline Drive and other western State Parks.

What is true of the State agency is equally true of many of the newspapers published in Virginia. When advertisements are sought for resort editions or garden club sections, not one hotel or business operating here is overlooked, but the space accorded to actual stories and photographs of local attractions falls far short of that given to other sections. It is no departure from the truth to state that much better coverage of Beach life finds its way into those newspapers published in Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia and New York.

We have no objections to a State-financed promotion campaign for the commercial attractions of the Valley and less to the publicizing of the truly majestic mountains to the west, but we would like to see some more consideration given Tidewater Virginia and, particularly, Virginia Beach. There are scenes of inspiring beauty west of Richmond, there is a wealth of colonial grandeur in the Colonial National Monument area, but there are just as many attractions at Virginia Beach and in the country adjacent to it. To overlook those attractions as consistently as is now the rule reflects upon the competence and the State interest of those charged with the publicity program.

Monday, the Seashore State Park at Cape Henry was opened to the public, with cabin reservations booked solidly through the month of September. It will be recalled that this opening of the most novel experiment in State Parks was mentioned in newspaper stories, but it also will be recalled that the emphasis in the story which originated in the Richmond office of the Conservation and Development Commission stressed the Hungry Mother Park, the Fairy Stone Park and the other little known expanses of hill and valley far, far to the west of here.

It may be assumed, and correctly so, that the Seashore State Park, because of its closeness to Virginia Beach, will attract as many vacationists as the rest of the little known parks combined, but that is no justification for an advertising program which overlooks this country except in a faintly patronizing way. This may be a stepchild to be neglected in the eyes of commissioners and editors intent upon attracting tourist patronage into Virginia, but better informed tourist agencies beyond these state borders take another view, and it is from their efforts rather than those of State organizations, that flows the great bulk of promotional materials on the Beach.

Last summer, when Norfolk's crusading editors cracked down upon the local dog track and sought to place emphasis upon other phases of Beach life, the seemingly unfavorable publicity was carried in all of the State papers. Somehow or other, as we checked the stories written about that subject with those published on general Beach routine, we gathered the impression that this country may be a summer paradise to out-of-state folks, but to Virginia newspapers it is a place always to be condemned and seldom praised. Advertising revenue may be sought eagerly and often, but there the line of interest seems to stop. We know where, of we speak, too, for to us has been delegated the almost impossible task of squeezing one or two stories on Beach activities into the daily papers of Virginia. A crazy group of cabins in a desolated spot in more-politically-important Shenandoah Valley may make the front page, but we must be satisfied with a hurried scanning of the story by someone no higher than a copyboy.

The local Information Bureau is doing everything within its power to keep visitors in the State as long as possible, suggesting trips throughout Tidewater, into Richmond and to points further west to those who have tarried here as long as desired. It believes that such is the responsibility of a Virginia institution, but also believes that reciprocation is in order and recognition of local attractions a matter which no agency can afford to overlook. It is willing to give as to take, believing that a material increase in Statewide benefit must result from such a program.

To strike an attitude of neglect towards Virginia Beach is harmful to the best interests of the State as a unit and to its several parts, such as lie in the Valley. Historic shrines and scenic attractions, such as lie in the Valley, are admirable promotion items, but the call of the seashore and the charm of a community as progressive and as interesting as this far outweigh such considerations with the average tourist. Linking Beach publicity with the tales of these other places, rather than its total neglect, appeals to us as a much more sensible program.

Or, finally, should the State agencies feel compelled to emphasize the historic background of Virginia, let them concentrate for a while upon the sun-kissed shoreline of Cape Henry, from which spot all of our history subsequent to Captain John Smith's arrival takes its emphasis and its development. No locale in American history has been so overlooked or neglected, yet here, on our very doorstep, lies a "natural" in exploitation which none save the Assembly of Tide-water Virginia Women are concerned with. If Yorktown, Williamsburg and Richmond are important because of their associations with colonial life and the beginnings of the American system, certainly Cape Henry is even more so, for here it was that the principles later affirmed throughout the State and the nation had their origin.

A good wine, it has been said, needs no bush, and certain it is that Virginia Beach has developed without too much State assistance. It cannot be doubted, though, that the rate of development of this resort community can be strongly accelerated by such assistance, and it is to those charged with the means of promotion that we direct this little plea. The stepchild is, after all, not without its own merits.

As Others See It

GHOST-WRITTEN SPEECHES

In the Baltimore Sun, J. Fred Essary, who enjoys an unusually wide acquaintance with the public men of the nation and what they are doing, confirms the prevailing suspicion that many political celebrities, including Presidents, do not write all their speeches but depend upon expert craftsmen or research attaches to compose them. Mr. Harding, for example, had Judson C. Welliver for this work. Mr. Hoover learned heavily upon French Strother and Ogden L. Mills, and even Alfred E. Smith famous for his gift of saying things in a striking way, took Judge Proskauer along during the 1928 campaign to write the preliminary drafts of important utterances.

Delivery of ghost-written speeches, however, is not confined to occupants of the White House. Many a congressman, Mr. Essary says, pays out cash for this sort of service. It will be remembered that, just a short time ago, Senator Dickinson sought to startle his colleagues with the statement that thousands of poverty-stricken Americans were eating frog food. Senators had evidence that the speech had been prepared in the Western headquarters of the Republican Party in Chicago.

Mr. Essary recalls the amusing incident of two representatives delivering identical memorial addresses. The same ghost writer had supplied both of them. Neither orator had listened at the other, and it was not until the Congressional Record appeared that the faux pas was discovered. Shining examples of those who do not employ ghostwriters, and would resent bitterly any such imputation, are provided in Senators Glass and Borah. Both men are known as speakers of great ability. The Idahoan has a polished, rhetorical style; the Virginian a clarity and incisiveness which distinguish all his addresses.

Like Mr. Essary, we can see no special impropriety in the delivery of ghost-written speeches, provided the addresses reflect the views of the men who deliver them. The President of the United States is a very busy man and he could not be expected to write all his orations for many and varied occasions. This applies with almost equal force to Governors. At the moment, we are thinking of at least one public man whose ghost writer has lifted from the depths of dullness almost to the heights of sparkling oratory. Mr. Hoover's speeches these days are actually worth reading. Ben Allen, his ghost writer, is well worth his hire.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

TO BE LIKED, YOU MUST LIKE OTHERS

I am interested in Robert Quillen's view that almost anybody of ordinary intelligence can be popular. All you have to do, he explains, "is to like people."

"Did you ever see a charming person with cold and unfriendly eyes?" he inquires. "I am sure you haven't. Those who seem charming are the ones who seem to like you."

"As a general rule, you will find people willing to meet you half way and treat you as well as you treat them. They are willing to like you if you give no offense, and thus you begin with the seed of popularity already planted. All you need do is encourage it a little bit and let it develop by natural processes."

"Most people spoil things by talking too much. In thoughtful conversations with one friend, they make rather catchy remarks about another. And the person talked about eventually hears what was said and feels hurt. It may not make an enemy of him, but he never again will believe that you like him and never again will like you. That ends your popularity so far as he is concerned."

"Everybody wishes to be liked. And most people will repay you generously if you like them and prove it by not making nasty cracks about them."—Mason City, Ia., Globe-Gazette.

Stocks of flu-cured leaf tobacco in the hands of dealers and manufacturers on April 1 totaled 873,007,000 pounds, according to a report released by the department of agriculture. This was the largest amount on hand on the date since 1930.

Reader's Write

Early and fully, as a literary furnace, where the liquid minds are solidified into opinion, the people are entitled to the whole truth. You said in an editorial of last week's issue that Herbert Hoover during his two efforts for the presidency said that "If I am elected there will be two cars in every garage and a chicken in every pot." As you well know, that speech was delivered in Elizabethtown, Tenn. and nowhere in the speech is there any statement as that.

The substance of that speech was, and still remains in spite of the new economy, a broad exposition of the progress of the United States from infancy to that date and it is one glorious episode in the history of a free people following their individual initiative to reach the highest point of social development since the beginning of civilization. And with continued progress we could reach that ultimate state where poverty would be abolished from this land and there would be two cars in every garage and a chicken in every pot.

That is the body of that speech and not any part of it said that "If I am elected these things will come to pass."

The second statement that you attribute to him is less than a half-statement. "If I am not returned to the presidency grass will grow in the streets of a hundred cities," was never said by Herbert Hoover. In fact, you will never find anywhere in the speeches of Herbert Hoover where he asked the American people to elect him President. He asked the electorate to return to power the Republican Party, of which he was the titular head, and would carry out the principles for which the platform called. As a passing remark, the past three years stand out in vivid contrast to that principal.

What he said was that if the tariff walls are removed grass will grow in the streets of a hundred cities. As you well know, that argument is irrefutable. The standard of living in this country has been reached and maintained by erecting barriers to keep the products of peasant Europe from competing with our own free workers. That system has allowed one car to roll the highways and only at the pleasure of the protected working man. Spend a few hours of reflection upon that philosophy and see what your conclusions are.

The third is the statement about the perfect Republican Constitution and the reactionary attitude of the party to progress. Any student of American history would know that a statement of that kind could only emanate from a bitter partisan spirit and cannot be based on facts.

The Constitution belongs to the people of the United States and not to any party or group as you infer. It is the most flexible document ever devised to maintain social order among a constantly growing people with interests so widely diversified. Of all the amendments attached to it, not more than four were put there by the Democratic Party, conspicuous among them being the Prohibition Amendment. I think that is conclusive evidence of the attitude of the men who have guided the destiny of this nation for the past seventy years, with brains attuned to changing conditions and ability to meet them, not by changing the American system but improving it.

If adherence to the supreme law of the land, reverence to the Supreme Court for its interpretation of that law, respect for the executive office to administer that law and an honest effort to promulgate new laws in conformity to the Constitution to meet changing conditions is reactionary, then the Republican Party should be proud to bear the title.

Yours truly,
GEORGE W. ROBBINS, JR.
Lynchaven, Virginia

Editor's note: Mr. Robbins' letter is an interesting one, however much it misconstrues the editorial referred to. As for Mr. Hoover's classical utterances, they have been used too far and too widely to permit any other than the most obvious interpretations, however they may have been clothed.

GAINS REPORTED IN RETAIL TRADE

Drought Continues to Hamper Farmers in Many Sections of the Nation.

Although record drought conditions over the Southeast have taken a toll of hundreds of millions of dollars from the farmers, the weather was a factor in sustaining gains in retail trade to a substantially higher level than last year, according to nationwide reports to the Department of Commerce last week. In some areas, retail business gained sharply over the previous good week as Summer caused a flurry of department store buying, particularly in Eastern cities. There was some seasonal recession on the West Coast.

While there were spotted drought conditions throughout the country, the severity of the situation was centered in Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama, the Carolinas, Kentucky, Virginia and Maryland. Kantizing thundershowers skipped about in the affected States, but so far they have been insufficient to quench the thirst of parched crops that have been without moisture for more than sixty days. Adding to the drought damage, heavy hail storms lashed crops in sections of Georgia. Agricultural workers estimated the loss over the drought area at $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 and food prices have soared as illustrated by the advance in retail cabbage prices from one to four cents.

Crops Cut in Half

Birmingham reported scattered showers but crops burned up, while there were also some scattering but beneficial rains in Tennessee. In Hamilton county, Ohio, the hay crop was cut in half, according to the Cincinnati report, while the potato crop was seriously impaired and corn was being replanted. Corn was looking up well in Kentucky, but tobacco was being replanted and wheat and potatoes were damaged. St. Louis reported beneficial rains over most of Missouri, although crop yields were greatly curtailed. The Northwest had an overabundance of rain, according to the Portland and Seattle reports, and conditions were improved in the Minnesota and Dakota regions. Hail damaged deciduous fruit trees in Southern Idaho. Six hundred cars of peaches were shipped from Georgia, compared with 797 last year. Portland estimated the Northwest apple crop at 24,000,000 boxes, or 60% of peak year production. Dallas reported the Texas cotton crop in excellent condition. Cool weather retarded corn and truck vegetables in the Denver area, but ranges were benefited and the lamb crop was above the 10-year average. A light Columbia river salmon catch was reported by Portland, due to high waters.

Reduction in relief rolls was widespread with private industry accounting for much absorption.

Industrial Gains Continue

Industrial centers maintained operating schedules at recent high levels with indications pointing to an abnormally busy June. Slackening in the automobile industry was reflected in steel centers, but rail and miscellaneous orders offset the automobile decline. In Pittsburgh 36 blast furnaces were in operation, a new high for the recovery period and with operating mills crowded to capacity, rehabilitation of old idle mills was started. In addition to rail, car and structural steel orders, Pittsburgh received an order for 25,000 tons of pipe from Shell Union Oil Co. Tinplate mills in Cleveland were operating at capacity and production was sustained at the auto parts plants in Northern Ohio with Fisher Bodies operating at capacity to turn out 25,000 bodies weekly. Akron tire factories also operated at capacity. Although employment was off slightly in Detroit, industrial power sales were higher than the previous and 1935 weeks. Mining of dynamite was started near Clermont, Pa. A half million dollar trailer assembly and manufacturing plant was announced in Los Angeles. Houston reported a $175,000 car factory; St. Louis a $550,000 power expansion program by the Monsanto Chemical Co. at Monsanto, Ill.

Labor troubles caused the transfer of activities of a Stockton, Calif., industrial concern, while labor conditions in Portland continued unsettled although 11,000 pulp and paper mill workers were given a wage increase. In Birmingham 225 striking coal miners returned to work but 2200 Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co. workers remained out.

FISHING PARTY DATA IS GIVEN

Lists of Commercial Guides in Nearby Areas Proffered by State Chamber.

Hundreds of commercial fishermen have put away their nets and turned their attention to guiding fishing parties to the fishing grounds of the tidal rivers, the Chesapeake and the Atlantic off Virginia, according to a list just compiled and now being distributed by the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce. This list, which has just been published in the State Chamber's magazine, "The Commonwealth," is accompanied by a map showing hundreds of points where fishing parties may get guides in the Old Dominion.

In an accompanying article, Winston Montague, hunting and fishing editor of The News Leader, Richmond, Va., tells of the best way to catch fish and of the fish that are biting best during the various months of the year.

"The best fishing is from June to October," Mr. Montague states. "Sometimes very good angling may be had in October, especially for bluefish, but October weather is uncertain, and as soon as the water really gets cool, the fishing is virtually over until the next season."

A notable exception to this is fishing for perch, variously known as blackfish or chub. These fish frequent rocky spots and do not seem to mind the cold waters. They are not known to a great many fishermen, but they are quite game and will put up a splendid fight when taken on light tackle. They may be taken until the first of December, sometimes even later. Fishing for them is particularly good in October and November."

"Perhaps the most popular fish in the bay for rod and reel enthusiasts is the bluefish. He is a scrapper who has justly earned his reputation. Pound for pound a bluefish is probably one of the gamest fish in any waters. They will fight to the last inch and even when they have been taken into the boat they have no aversion to snapping at an angler if he is so foolish as to give them an opportunity to do so."

"Sportsmen flock to Chesapeake Bay from all areas during the bluefish season and the fame of the fishing has spread so that many come from other states each year to try this thrilling sport. So popular has this fishing become that it is sometimes difficult to secure a boat. This is especially true of week-ends. Wise fishermen either telephone or write their favorite captain sometime before the day they plan to fish."

The State Chamber is prepared to furnish a list of fishing guides, with their telephone numbers, upon request.

Church Service to Change

The hours of masses at the altar of the Sea Catholic Church will be changed from 8:15 and 10:30 to 7:30, 9:30 and 10:30 a. m. on June 28. Until then, the winter schedule of services will be effective.

COURTESY — "THE GENUINE ARTICLE"

There are two kinds of courtesy in modern business. One, is politeness, which is good. The other, is "the genuine article," which is better.

To the Norfolk and Western Railway Family, courtesy means more than mere politeness. It means friendliness toward the manufacturer, and the farmer along the railroad's lines, and toward the traveler. It means a sincere interest in their problems. It means a sincere desire to serve them faithfully and efficiently. And it means a sincere appreciation for their patronage. This is "the genuine article." It is genuine because it springs from something deeper than simply the desire to sell freight and passenger service.

Employees of the Norfolk and Western Railway—all the way through the ranks—have grown up with the railroad and the territory it traverses. The railroad's success is their success. Its achievements are their achievements. And in its progress, and the progress of Norfolk and Western territory, they have a real pride. These are the elements of the spirit of the Norfolk and Western Family. And, from this spirit, comes Norfolk and Western courtesy.

So, when you ship or travel over the Norfolk and Western, you will get more than mere politeness. You will get that which distinguishes the Norfolk and Western Family—courtesy that is "the genuine article."

COOL and comfortable for summer wear are the gay summer play clothes worn by these children. Their mothers, too, are cool and comfortable, for they are sure that the vat-dyed colors of the crisp cotton fabrics are proof against fading exposure to sun and any amount of rigorous cleaning. Good Talent Engaged
The boxing and wrestling cards will bring to the newly-constructed ring, placed directly in front of the main grandstand, some of the better known boxers and wrestlers of the country. In order to handle the anticipated crowds, a collapsible grandstand is being constructed inside the track and additional ring-side seats will be placed directly in front of the rings.

In response to an inquiry regarding dogs, it was learned that some few races may be run for the amusement of the spectators only. The elaborate "option system" used last year has been discarded, and the track will function solely as a center of amusement.

Although the cards have not yet been returned to the office, assurances of an approximate $1,000 have thus far been received by the chamber's executives. dusty. Negro veterans, holding more real money in their hands than had ever before been their lot, staunchly maintained that they would buy homes for their families. Others talked of buying a good pair of shoes, or getting married or of purchasing automobiles.

Discussing the ease and lack of confusion with which the wholesale distribution of bonds was handled in Washington and in the 60,000 postoffices of the country, Mr. Ashburn stated that never before had he observed or heard of such efficiency as was to be noted early this week. The system, he added, was ironclad and thorough, yet so devised as to permit a prompt disposition of each individual case. There was no waiting, no delay, he said, which spoke eloquently of the capabilities of Uncle Sam's postal forces.

No reports were available yesterday from the other county postoffices, but reports indicated that a large percentage of the bonds so distributed have been certified for payment.

BAYNE THEATRE PREVUES

The sands of Sahara flame with revolt and France's Foreign Legion fights and loves with gallantry again in 20th Century's "Under Two Flags," the tremendous drama spectacle which brings Ronald Colman, Claudette Colbert, Victor McLaglen and Rosalind Russell to the screen today and tomorrow, June 19 and 20. "Under Two Flags" tells the story of a man who is brought back from a self-imposed doom by the love of a woman.

"These Three," Samuel Goldwyn's powerful screen drama, brings Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon and Joel McCrea to the Bayne Theatre for two days, beginning Sunday, June 21. This Lillian Hellman screen play depicts how a whispering campaign growing out of a child's malicious lie nearly ruined the lives of three innocent people.

Dolores Costello Barrymore shares stellar honors with Freddie Bartholomew in Selznick International's "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which will be shown Tuesday, June 23. C. Aubrey Smith, Guy Kibbee, Mickey Rooney and Henry Stephenson head the supporting cast. The story follows the familiar adventures of the little American boy who became a nobleman and went to England to live in Dornoch Castle with his grandfather, the treacherous old Earl, who refuses to recognize the child's adored young mother, "Dearest," because his late son had married her against his wishes. How the little chap's love works a complete transformation in the gruff old fellow is charmingly depicted.

Grace Moore's golden voice will be heard from the Bayne screen Wednesday and Thursday, June 24 and 25 when Columbia's new musical romance, "The King Steps Out" will be shown. Miss Moore has for her leading man, Franchot Tone, who is seen in the role of the Emperor Francis Josef, who woos one daughter of Duke Maximilian (played by Walter Connolly) and marries the other. Miss Moore appears as the "other" daughter. Others in the cast include Raymond Walburn, Victor Jory, Elizabeth Risdon and Thurston Hall.

Use of perfumery in France is decreasing.

Club Will Enlarge Parking Facilities

Construction of a new parking lot for members and guests of the Cavalier Beach Club was begun this week under the direction of Fred A. Haycox, building contractor. Space for an additional 100 automobiles will be provided.

The new parking lot, located just south of the main entrance to the Cavalier Hotel on Atlantic Avenue, is expected to solve the parking difficulties which this season have harassed patrons of the club. In size, it will be 350 by 50 feet.

Forty-eight cars were parked on this week on a traffic island undertaken by the state highway department. One function of the workers will be to weigh trucks 14 times during the next 16 months at 54 temporary and three permanent scales and collect information including rated capacity of each truck, its origin and destination, commodity and whether the cargo will be trans-shipped, at a railroad station or wharf. The three main weighing stations will be at Alexandria, Rosneke and Suffolk.

Frosting will not crack or peel off a cake if a tablespoon of lemon juice is added with the frosting.

In Days Gone By

Ten Years Ago With The Virginia Beach News

The annual Federal Government inspection of the property at the State Rifle Range, was held last Thursday by Colonel H. Q. Price, U. S. A. Senior instructor of the Maryland National Guard, and instructor of the Virginia National Guard, Major Nichols, Executive Officer of the Maryland National Guard, accompanied Col. Price on the tour, and both gave splendid recommendations on the conditions of the camp site and equipment. It is generally assumed that the purpose of this inspection was to determine the amount and condition of the equipment necessary for the Maryland troops to encamp again at Virginia Beach this summer. It was previously announced that they would not return here this year, but as no definite arrangements have been made to go elsewhere it is believed they will take advantage of the invitation Virginia has extended to them to encamp here again this year.

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Club of Princess Anne County was held Tuesday at the Kempsville school house. The members attending, the number being smaller than usual account of threatening weather conditions, were given the pleasure of hearing Hon. Harris Hart, State Commissioner of the Department of Instruction of Virginia, speak on standards of county schools. Mr. Hart stressed the fact that there were too many standards of inferior quality. He also stressed the importance of primary education, twelve months school, and consolidation of one-room schools, eliminating of small unit high schools consisting of fifty pupils, and the necessary aid and proper training of children by their parents.

When the General Assembly at its recent session in Richmond passed the Parker-Veilles fee reform bill, Princess Anne county was placed in the same classification as Norfolk County, which will mean that the maximum compensation has been raised, making a maximum salary of $8,000 per year.

The $60,000 bonds on the new Oceana High School building, which were sold last week, brought a record price. Brown & Bosworth, of St. Louis, were the high bidders, paying a $3,000 bonus for them. The bonds are 20 year average, bearing 5 1/2 per cent interest. Blue prints have been made for the building and contractors' bids are expected in by the 15th of April. The plans call for twelve class rooms with an auditorium and large gymnasium. The building will be modern in every respect and built of brick.

If the determined efforts of some of the most prominent real estate operators in and around Virginia Beach, count for anything, the busy season for this popular resort is to be greatly lengthened. The fact, say some of the real estate dealers, is that Virginia Beach as a summer watering resort has demonstrated its popularity and leaves little to be said in that direction, but its desirability in the fall and spring months is not sufficiently known.

Trees Are Planted To Control Erosion

Application of a balanced program of erosion control conducted by the Soil Conservation Service in cooperation with the Extension Service in Virginia included the planting of 3,390,690 tree seedlings on badly eroded land. The trees were set out on demonstration and CCC camp areas during the planting season just ended, reports H. Y. Forsythe, Chief Forester of the Service in Virginia.

Interest in planting eroded areas, gullies, and idle lands to trees is increasing, says Forsythe. Trees have been planted on the farms of 444 cooperators. A total of 2,247 badly eroded acres have been reforested to prevent further damage from soil washing.

The seedlings were of 24 species. However, a large majority of the seedlings were loblolly pine and black locust. Exactly 1,109,953 loblolly pine and 1,859,259 black locust were planted.

Utilization of eroded land for trees will prevent erosion damage and provide a useful crop of fuel, fence posts, and timber for farmers cooperating in the erosion control program, Forsythe points out.

Marcel de Persig, former night chef of the Mayflower Hotel, in Washington, and chef of the Ritz Carlton, in Atlantic City, will be in charge of the kitchen, and he will have associated with him a staff of outstanding merit.

Adjacent to the Village Barn are located the "Ole Swimming Hole" and Playland, which offers all the attractions of the modern casino. Both restaurant and game department will be opened formally tonight.

Crystal Club to Open
Out on Crystal Lake, in the Old Masury Mansion, Jimmy Brink, proprietor of the New Lookout House, in Cincinnati, one of the better known clubs of the middle west, will stage a preview of his seasonal presentation tonight, with the formal opening scheduled for tomorrow night. The club has been extensively renovated and redecorated, and the management is confident that the Crystal Club's offerings will be among the most outstanding to be witnessed here this season.

Harry Deikman and his orchestra, of Chicago, has been engaged for the opening weeks, with Sammy Walsh, late of the Town Casino, in Miami Beach, engaged as master of ceremonies. Featured attractions of the opening show will include Jennings and Murray, coming here from the Edgewater Beach Hotel, in Chicago; Billy White, comedian; Keller and Nally, intimate song stylists, and as an intermission attraction, Pavey and King, who will play the favorite songs requested by the patrons.

Cocktail Hour Planned

Two shows are planned nightly, one at 11:30 and another at 2 o'clock, with a daily Cocktail Hour set for 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Brink and his associates have leased the Crystal Club for a term of five years. Because of the prominence of the season, many of the innovations in club decoration planned for this year have been postponed until next spring, but the changes made over last year's setup are regarded as most interesting and novel.

Bob Sylvester and his orchestra continues at the Cavalier Beach Club; Emmerson Gill and his orchestra at the Surf Beach Club; Billy Brooks at the French Casino; Billy Silers at the Club, "500"; Paul Tremain in the Peacock Ballroom, and Clint Turner and his all-Negro revue at the Frolics.

All contracts were closed on Monday and actual construction work got under way on Wednesday. Yesterday, two of the first ten units were being rushed to completion.

The tourist cottage, with modern hotel service, Mr. Boswell stated, is the answer to the average man's need of small, compact, modern and reasonably priced vacation accommodations. It is suitable, too, he continued, for the salesman and the tourist, both of whom dislike the formality of the hotel. With a garage adjacent to their homes of the night, they may live exactly as they would were they actually in their own homes.

The visiting team, with seven errors to its credit, collected an equal number of hits, but could turn no more than four of the ten into runs. Miller pitched for the losers and Mason worked behind the plate.

Leaving their new ball park for the first time in weeks, Charity will journey to South Norfolk on Saturday afternoon to meet the strong Aces of that locality. Returning to their own field on Sunday, Charity will engage the South Norfolk Gems. A large local attendance is anticipated at each game.

SPECHT LEADER WPA TO REVIEW IN ARTS MOVE FUTURE PROGRAM

thing—in this country. But European nations under state supervision encourage the talented and finance their education in the arts.

"Even Mexico has its Ministry of the Fine Arts. So has Turkey. In France, England and Italy there is government aid. But in this country—the richest and most powerful in the world—he who aspires to express himself through any of the art mediums must fight his way alone and unpaid. He, in short, is the forgotten man; and there is no New Deal for him.

Mr. Specht speaks from his own experience. Of Pennsylvania Dutch ancestry, he was born in Sinking Springs, near Reading. He was poor and he was a violinist, and he aspired to go places in the musical world, either to be a great violinist or to lead an outstanding symphony orchestra. He found that it was necessary to go to Europe to continue his studies, but the great cost of such further study blocked him.

"And so," he said, "I asked myself, why was it necessary to go to Europe? Why couldn't I study in my own country? Why didn't my country make it easier for a poor youth to obtain the best in training and instruction?"

"The one answer, the only answer, I think is the establishment of a Federal Bureau of Arts, probably at first under the Department of the Interior."

Mr. Specht, aided by musical giants from all over America, has pressed his demand for such a department for years, and now, he believes, fruition of his plans is near.

The Specht orchestra, it will be recalled, played at the inaugural balls for Presidents Hoover and Roosevelt, swung around the country in 1933 on the Democratic Good-Will Tour and provided the music for many of the celebrations which in that year ushered in many new Democratic governors. His has been, in addition, an outstanding name in European musical circles, and he has played by command before most of the ruling monarchs of Europe.

based upon a series of questions and answers designed to make clear the various aspects of the work program. The questions will be asked by representatives of various groups such as mayors and other local public officials, tax payers, material manufacturers, project workers, etc. Answers will be furnished by Mr. Hopkins and his assistant administrators.

In connection with the group radio meetings arrangements were being perfected at State W. P. A. Headquarters to hold group meetings at all the district headquarters to which public officials, W. P. A. administrative officials, employees, project sponsors, and project workers will be invited.

Workers to Assemble

W. P. A. administrative headquarters force, and all W. P. A. employees in the Richmond and adjacent area have been invited to assemble in the John Marshall High School auditorium Saturday in order to participate in the conference which Mr. Smith explained yesterday would not be made obligatory on any employee other than administrative. In preparation for the Richmond meeting A. R. Tiller, representing the Stewart-Warner Radio Company, has consented to install a large receiving set in the auditorium, and similar arrangements are now being made throughout the state for assistance by the local distributors of radio sets.

In commenting upon the radio program, Mr. Smith said, "I cannot stress too much the importance of this broadcast to public officials, project sponsors, administrative employees, project workers, and all interested citizens of Virginia." A better understanding of the work program after July 1 should result in better projects which will have as their aim the maximum benefit to the community, the state, and the W. P. A. project workers.

For the general information of the radio participants it was stated today that W. R. V. A. of Richmond and W. T. A. R. of Norfolk had accepted the program and were cooperating to the fullest extent with W. P. A. officials.

SLOW PROGRESS IS REPORTED BY LOCAL CHAMBER ON FUND DRIVE

Hotel and Business Interests Urged to Support Beach Publicity Drive.

PICTORIAL FOLDERS ARE EXPECTED DURING WEEK

Wade Kornegay Elected Secretary of Organization; Charter Is Sought.

Reporting a scant $605 collected thus far in the annual membership drive, officers of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce this week issued an appeal to hotel and business interests operating on the beach to indicate their cooperation with the present publicity program by returning the application cards sent them last week. Although all cash will be gratefully and cheerfully accepted, the officers pointed out that the memberships could be paid later in the season at the discretion of the contributor. What is wanted now, they asserted, are the cards indicating the desired cooperation and support.

To the list of members published last week have been added the following: Albemarle Hall, $150; Crystal Club, $50; Sport Shop, $50; and Tanawell E. Bradford, $25, of Norfolk, $20.

Booklets Expected Soon

At a meeting of the executive committee held Tuesday night in the Mayor's office, it was reported that the pictorial booklets will be ready for distribution within the next week. An order of 50,000 copies of the attractive folder is now on its way through the press, and when the copies are released, they will be broadcast throughout all of eastern United States and Canada.

The information booklet detailing hotel and cottage rates, it was learned, has been so much in demand during the past three weeks that another edition will be issued within the next ten days. Hotels and cottages featured in the booklet have been asked to check the published data for possible error or change and to report to the local offices. Other hostilities not included in the first edition are desired in order that they may be given space in the new order.

Clipping Account Given

A return of an approximate 1,000 clippings, both pictorial and news stories, was outlined to the committee. These clippings have been inserted in the local office's request book and are open to inspection by anyone interested. The many newspapers represented give (Continued on Page Eight)

All Junior Horse Competitions Set For Cavalier Ring, July 5

Figures Are Given On Dog Law Results

The Town ordinance forbidding dogs to run around un-leashed has raised a veritable storm of protest from local residents. Chief of Police McCannan opined this week, but has brought in little revenue.

Of $3.75 collected thus far in fees, $2.25 has been paid out for their upkeep. (The fine collected from first offenders is $1 plus a charge of 25 cents per day for the dog's board.)

Five dogs have been claimed by their irate masters, and three dogs unclaimed were turned over to the county game warden by the police department, in accordance with the provisions of the ordinance.

LOCAL B. & L. UNIT TO PAY DIVIDEND

Usefulness to Community Is Stressed in Announcement of First Return.

The Virginia Beach Federal Savings and Loan Association, completing a successful half-year of existence, has declared a two per cent dividend for the six-month period ending June 30. W. H. Terry, Jr., secretary of the association, announced yesterday.

This dividend, Mr. Terry pointed out, represents a return of four per cent per year to the shareholders of the local organization. The only such agency functioning in Princess Anne County under Federal charter, the Virginia Beach association was organized and approved last fall. Directed entirely by local men, it provides a medium, Mr. Terry stated, for the proper financing of a home by reputable citizens of the community, while its savings functions offer a return which is attractive to the systematic saver.

Savings Function Stressed

The association's usefulness to the community, the secretary stressed, is limited only by the lack of funds to take care of the many applications received for food loans. To increase the capital invested in the organization and so open the way for an increase in loans, the board of directors is planning a drive for additional savings accounts in July. Funds so received are added to the Federal government, thus insuring a working capital of sufficient size to take care of all local applications.

All holders of installment thrift shares and optional savings shares, Mr. Terry continued, may at any time after July 1 present their pass books at the offices of the association and have their dividends entered therein. Checks will be mailed to holders of full paid shares for the dividends on (Continued on Page Eight)

Sanitarium Makes Annual Fund Plea

Making its annual appeal for funds, the Infant Sanitarium will stage a "Balloons Day" on the streets of Virginia Beach next Saturday, July 4. Local girls will sell the balloons, which have been a feature of the Beach's July 4 celebration for several years.

The sanitarium, which has accommodations for an approximate 65 children and staff members, is dependent upon public support for its continuance. Each summer it brings to Virginia Beach several hundred small tots and children for an eventful, health-building vacation, taking them from the underprivileged homes of Norfolk and Portsmouth and Norfolk and Princess Anne counties.

Wide response has regularly greeted the institution's annual appeal for funds, and it is the hope of the board of managers that the needs of this season will be met adequately next Saturday.

Children Under 18 Years of Age to Handle All Details of Novel Show.

Because of the wide interest shown by children in recent horse shows staged by the Cavalier Horse Show Association, the first annual All Junior Show will be sponsored by the local unit in the Cavalier Ring on Sunday afternoon, July 5, beginning at 2 o'clock. The classes will be open only to young people eighteen years of age and under, all of whom shall be considered amateurs.

The entire list of officials, according to the preliminary announcement, such as judges, ringmasters and clerks will be young people under eighteen years of age. During the show, no adults will be allowed in the ring except those photographers approved by the association. There will be no entrance fees and no admission charge for children.

First Time in History

According to the sponsors of the show, this is the first time in the history of ring exhibitions that a show of high calibre has been placed entirely in young hands. The opportunity presented to those who will handle the show is regarded as particularly valuable to the young riding enthusiasts.

Mrs. Fontaine Maury Thraves and Mrs. Ellis Wood Page-Keith have been named as directors. The junior committee is composed of Miss Patricia Thraves, Miss Ellis Wood Keith, Miss Perry Kipstein, Mr. James Wolcott, Jr., Miss Sarah Louise Adams, Miss Susan Potter, Mr. Bobby Roosevelt and Mr. Lee Henderson. ## DRIVING DRUNK PENALTIES SET

County Passes New Ordinance on First Reading; Hospital Costs Raised.

Seeking to curb accidents which have their origin in drunken driving, the Board of Supervisors of the county last Monday approved on its first reading an ordinance providing strict penalties for persons apprehended when driving under the influence of intoxicants. The ordinance will be given its second and final reading at the next meeting of the board.

The proposed law provides a fine of from $100 to $1,000 or imprisonment from one to six months for persons convicted of violating its provisions. Arguments for and against the measure must be submitted at the meeting scheduled for July 6.

Suspension Denied

It is further stipulated that any person convicted of violating the ordinance a second time shall not only be fined and imprisoned but the courts are restrained from suspending the sentence. First offenders, in addition to the punitive provisions, will have their licenses suspended for one year and second offenders for three years.

Enactment of the proposed law was regarded as necessary to curb the threat of accidents on the main highway leading through the county to the summer resorts located on the Atlantic and on Chesapeake Bay. Insofar as could be determined, general approval has been accorded the measure.

Hospital Bill Approved

Discussion of the announcement from the Norfolk Hospital Association that $150 per patient per day would hereafter be charged all indigent county patients occupied a considerable portion of the meeting. Agreement to the new contract was made.

M. J. Farrar was awarded the contract for the collection of garbage in the county development north of Virginia Beach. The matter of obtaining a welfare worker for the county to permit local participation in the State welfare fund was delayed for final action until the July 6 meeting.

ADDED CHANNEL CHARGES TO BE SHARED BY TOWN

Cost of Dredging First Link in Waterway Contingent on Federal Action.

STREET WILL BE PAVED

Extra Policeman Ordered to Force.

Reporting to the Town Council that hope was high for the acceptance of the Lynnhaven waterway project by the Army Engineers, Floyd T. Deary, leader of the movement to secure the desired channel facilities, this week sought the cooperation of the Town in completing the widening and deepening of the Linkhorn Channel in accordance with plans suggested by the engineers. Completion of the dredging work, he pointed out, would be contingent upon Federal approval of the project.

In accordance with Mr. Deary's proposal, the council voted to defray one-fourth of the cost of the improvement if the entire project is approved and the balance of the funds secured by popular subscription. Richard Crane, it was learned, has agreed to subscribe a similar amount, and it is the plan of the sponsors to secure an additional one-quarter from the county board of supervisors. The remaining sum will be raised by local subscription.

Survey Is Conducted

The project sponsored by the Town is the $600-foot cutoff from Archibald Island, in Long Creek, to Broad Bay. The original channel was cut some months ago by mosquito control forces and was later widened and deepened with funds raised locally. When the new dredging plans are completed, the channel will have an average width of 30 feet and will be of a depth of eight feet, sufficient for the passage of motor boats of substantial size.

TRANSIENT CAMP CONTINUED HERE

Town and County Agree to Maintain Workers for Additional 30 Days.

Joint Town and County maintenance of the Transient Camp for another month under the existing organization was agreed upon Monday in meetings held by the Board of Supervisors and the Town Council. Each agency has subscribed $100 for the maintenance of the camp, with the understanding that the full force of workers will be continued on the mosquito control projects now being rushed to completion.

Supervision of the camp, which continues on the State Military Reservation, is vested in C. F. Anderson, formerly director of the camp under the Works Progress Administration. The actual details of the field work, which is being conducted on a countywide scale, are vested in the Mosquito Control Commission and the U. S. Public Health Service. Following the setup approved several months ago, the workers are paid by Washington from funds set aside for relief purposes.

Report of Progress Made

Discussing the progress made in the past month on the mosquito control projects, Robert Bailio, local supervisor, reported to the Town and county organizations that the work of ditching and draining continues at a rapid rate, together with the spraying of low areas. Lovitt's March, south of Virginia Beach, and the low country west of the Town are chief points of attack at this time.

How long the workers will be available in this area could not be ascertained this week. It is understood, however, that the camp can be retained here for several additional months if the governing bodies favor such extension. Sole cost of continuing the camp is a maximum appropriation by each agency of $100 per month.

Option System Is Not Contrary To Law, N. Y. Justice Holds

Case Paralleling Court Action Tried Here Last Summer Thrown Out by Judge Bonyne; Church Bazaars Held No Less Violation of Law than Track.

An interesting commentary on the dog track decision reached in the local courts last summer is found in a judgment handed down last week to Percy C. Reed, of Mineola, L. I., by Supreme Court Justice Paul Bonyne. The story, as reported in the New York Times, runs as follows:

After Justice Bonyne had granted Reed a declaratory judgment stating that he "operates an ingeniously devised scheme designed to avoid the penalties of the penal law," Reed's council announced that the greyhound racing season would go on as scheduled. First races were held on the track at the Mineola Fair Grounds last Saturday night.

Option System Used

Reed's method, the court pointed out, is to sell "purchased options" upon each dog in a race and if these are not exercised he buys back such as he may elect at

CRYSTAL CLUB VILLAGE BARN FORMALLY OPEN

Early Opening of Renovated Dog Track Anticipated; Record Season Seen.

Although slowed up considerably by the hard rains and cool weather of the past few days, the resort season at Virginia Beach this week swung into mid-season form with crowds surpassing former attendance records pouring into hotels and cottages. With the opening of two additional night clubs and the scheduled opening of the sports arena next week, entertainment facilities also reached a new high, with elaborate plans in the making for the July 4 weekend.

The Crystal Club, located in the old Masury mansion on Crystal Lake, and the Village Barn, developed on the site of the Club Tallyho, were the two newcomers added to local night life. Both are operated under new management and have announced future attractions which suggest a more eventful entertainment program than has ever before been presented to the summer visitor.

Early Opening Expected

Nearing completion of their plans, the operators of the old Cavalier Kennel Club property expect to announce their opening date within the next few days. According to the tentative schedule, miniature automobile racing, greyhound racing, boxing and wrestling will be featured nightly.

Hotels and cottages report greater houses than have been the rule during any previous June. Reservations now on hand for July and August indicate the most successful season in the resort's history. Rain dampened some spirits this week, but the weatherman's promise of an early return of sunshine all clear skies has dispelled most of the gloom.

Floor Show Applauded

Top honors for the finest floor show on the Beach were generally accorded to the Crystal Club, which presented the glib Sammy Walsh as master of ceremonies with an all-star cast. Not alone did Walsh introduce the other performers, but his songs, dances and intimate chatter brought constant rounds of applause from the crowds which witnessed the opening presentation of the remodeled club on Crystal Lake.

Paul Specht's orchestra, featured at the Village Barn, drew applause as the smoothest band to appear here this summer. On the air every night through the facilities of Radio Station WTAR, the Specht organization this week introduced a brand of rhythm to the resort which finds a source of competition only in the music provided by Emmerson Gill and his orchestra, which has been continued on for an additional four weeks at the Surf Beach Club.

Attendance Is Good

In spite of the rain and cold weather, attendance was generally good at hotels and amusement centres. Off to a good start, the Crystal Club, under the personal direction of Jimmy Brink, owner and operator of the famous New Lookout House, in Cincinnati, presented an entertainment bill that clicked from the beginning. Sharing top honors with Sammy Walsh was the comedian, Billy White, direct from a Broadway production, whose antics on the floor convulsed even the most of matrons. His impersonation of a soldier returning from the late Italo-Ethiopian conflict was excellent, but his depiction of a young girl about to take a bath was even better.

CHARITY DIVIDES PATRICK HENRY WEEKEND COUNT DRAMA PLANNED

Red Jackets Lose to South Norfolk Aces; Batter Gems by 13-5 Score.

Winning one and losing one game over the past weekend, the Charity Red Jackets swung into their midseason schedule with a record of nineteen games won out of a total of twenty-one played. Last Saturday, at South Norfolk, the county team suffered its second defeat of the season at the hands of the strong South Norfolk Aces, who finished up to the tune of 1-2 Sunday afternoon, on their home field, the Charity nine, behind the splendid pitching of Self, secured a measure of revenge by sending the South Norfolk Gems out of the park on the losing end of a 13-5 tally.

Saturday's game was decided in the first inning when Tatem cracked out a home run with the bases loaded. Another run came across the plate in the initial frame, and although the Aces were given only two more scoring opportunities both in the seventh and eighth, the least so established proved too much for the Jackets to overcome.

Score in Last Inning

Charity was unable to score until the final inning, when a brief spurt sent home two runs. Self and Harrell, who pitched for the losers, allowed only six hits, with Charity collecting four safeties from Watt and Williams. Three errors were charged to each team.

Sunday's game found the Charity team in their usual form, and the game ended as most games end on the Charity diamond. Balancing behind the effective twirling of Self who struck out twelve of the opposing batters, the local team collected 11 hits and tallied 13 runs. Waterman was the batting star of the afternoon, collecting four hits out of five trips to the plate. Burten hit a homer for the visitors.

Early Lead Overcome

Facing a two-run deficit at the end of the first half of the first inning, Charity bombarded the offerings of Barnes, opening pitcher for the Gems, in effective manner, to send four runs across the plate. In the sixth inning, with the score tied at four-all, Charity again went into action, scoring five counters with four additional tallies recorded in the seventh frame. Again errors marred the game. Charity being charged with three and the Gems with four.

July Date Selected

The celebration will be held July 15, 16, and 17, because of more favorable weather conditions for an out-door event, than that which prevailed in May, the month of Henry's birth.

THE KEYNOTERS

The Hon. Clifton A. Woodrum, member of Congress from the Sixth District of Virginia, was selected, presumably by the State Democratic Central Committee, to deliver the keynote speech at the State Democratic Convention held at Norfolk, Virginia.

The duty of a keynoter is to speak for and present the views of his party. Personally, we are very fond of Mr. Woodrum. Our friendship antedates his advent as a Congressman. It is not pleasant, therefore, to disagree with or to criticize his record though it is more or less collective. However, the acts and words of men in public life are justly subject to criticism, especially by the press, the duty of which it is to point out the virtues or fallacies of the acts of public servants.

This keynoter seemingly overlooked State policies past and present, evidently deeming them of no consequence nor of interest to the people, especially the taxpayers of his State and that the only declaration of party principles to be stressed was to defend the Roosevelt New Deal. This, of course, was a man-sized job and we doubt not but that it strained the keynoter's ingenuity to make the defense.

There was but little defense for Congress by reason of its dereliction of duty, nor of its part in the wholesale repudiation of platform and campaign pledges, the thought seemingly being to defend the initiator and leader of ideas hereafter deemed foreign to our American system of government.

Some years ago Mr. Justice McLean, following a virulent attack upon the court by a leading newspaper, because of an unpopular constitutional decision rendered wrote the Editor in protest: in which he said, "A Justice who renders a decision contrary to his beliefs as to the written law is not only corrupt, but a traitor to his country." If this be true with respect to a Justice of the Supreme Court, why is it not equally true with respect to a Congressman, a Cabinet officer or even a President of the United States. They all are required, by the people, to take the same oath before they assume the duties of the office to which they have been elected, and each is equally responsible and obligated to maintain the integrity of the written law. To Congress is delegated the power to make Federal laws within certain limits beyond which it cannot legally go. It has no right to change these basic laws; only the people can do that. It has no right to redelegate the lawmaking power, delegated solely to them. It has no right to tax one class and turn the proceeds over to another. It has assumed power time and time again that it did not possess. It will not do to say they did not know the law because the humblest of men can understand the humbler of laws. The highest can plead ignorance as an excuse for violation of any law.

We know that the Congressmen was defending a difficult cause, nevertheless, we do not think he should have said that the President nor Congress had violated but "one plank in the platform of 1938," viz: the economy plank and this "only because the people demanded it." The people had made no such demand, they had had no opportunity to make such a demand; there has been no discussion nor thought given to it by the people. The only spoken word of the people on the subject was through their duly constituted delegates, each of which declared for a balanced budget and reduction of expenditures. A President and Congress were elected on this platform. At no time have the people demanded a departure from the promise to reduce expenditures 25% in the cost of the Federal government.

Senator Barkley, keynoter at the Democratic National Convention, is of the rugged type; about five feet, ten inches in height; weighs about 170 pounds, of a florid complexion, not an attractive personality but strong intellectually and undeniably an able speaker—not equal to Senators George, Glass or Borah, but forceful and an outstanding exponent of the "New Deal." No one is better suited perhaps to fill the roll of defender of the "New Deal." He, like Congressman Woodrum, did his best. "What I ask," said the Senator, "and what the people want to know is whether the Republican program contemplates the honest enforcement of the new enactments; whether those who shape that program will divorce themselves from whatever allegiance may have held them to those interests; or whether they propose to undo the work we have accomplished."

Does it lie in the mouth of Senator Barkley to demand of any man or any party, honesty of purpose and sincere effort in carrying out principles enunciated in a party platform? One would suppose that after the many failures of the New Deal, broken promises, wasteful expenditures of public funds, reversals sustained before the Supreme Court, that a speaker of Senator Barkley's resourcefulness would have discovered a better argument to sustain the policies of the "New Deal."

He says, "The people call for assurances that the structure of honesty and freedom which we have erected shall not be destroyed... it is couched in their insulting speeches." This, in reference to the Republican platform.

We have no authority to speak for the Republican party nor do we seem to do so; it is not our party nor have we ever believed in the policies it has pursued. It would seem, however, that the spokesman for the "New Deal" should extract some of the beams from his own eyes before he chastised others for dishonesty. The "New Deal" has spent tens of thousands of the taxpayers' money investigating acts of Republicans. As yet, it has sent no one here to force in authority to jail. It has cost aspirations upon and sought to blast the reputations of honorable men without any while it has steadfastly refused to investigate charges of wrongdoing within its own ranks. Is it afraid to take the lid off and expose the purposes for which public funds have been wasted?

Nor does he spare the Liberty League, Sentinels of the Republic, etc. These organizations have committed no offense to the public, they are not officeholders, they are not seeking office. Their only offense has been to organize, as they have a right to do, to defend their rights as guaranteed by law, to preserve the integrity of the Constitution as it stands before their property honestly acquired and guaranteed by the laws of their country. That they have inveighed against the waste and inefficiency, unbalanced budget, ignoring of constitutional limitations, broken pledges by those in authority, yes; but are they not justified in so doing?

The truth hurts, so our keynoter unable to deny the charges, seeks by abuse of those who by self-interest, close application and strict conformance to the law have grown the place of one they have by innuendo and insinuations, on the hustings, the radio, the press and circularization with public funds; sought to discredit this element of society in order to pave the way for their destruction. Of the Supreme Court Senator Barkley says, "When five of those eminent men say a law violates the Constitution and four of them equally eminent... say it does not violate the Constitution, then we are at least relieved of any obligation to enforce it." Underwrite the infallibility of the five whose views prevail.

Is this the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth? Is not a Congressman, a cabinet officer and the President required to take the same oath to support and uphold the Constitution that a member of the Court is required to take? Is he not required to obey the law? Is it not as much their duty to obey the Constitution as it is of the Supreme Court? If every Judge were to declare an act lawful that is inhibited by the Constitution, is it not the duty of the President and Congress still to keep faith with those who elect them as well as to their God before whom they take the oath? Let's see. Of the nine decisions declaring unconstitutional acts of the "New Deal"—three were held by nine judges (unanimous), one by eight to one, four by six to three, and one, only one, five to four decision, and yet the implication of the Senator was that all were five to four decisions.

Even so does not the Senator advocate majority rule? Was it not by a majority rule that these acts were enacted? Does not the Senator follow his leader in the desire to substitute a majority rule for the two-thirds rule in our future presidential nominating conventions? He objects to an average of 71-9 to 1-8-9 decisions by the Supreme Court, but he wants a possible one majority out of 529 delegates to say who the presidential candidate shall hereafter be. May not the chickens come home to roost? May not the South, of which Senator Barkley is one, at some future time, rue the day in which it so cheerfully surrenders the two-thirds rule? Has not a majority of the Supreme Court more than once sanctioned the ideals of the Southern people? Our Southern representatives seem to have thrown into reverse gear nearly every ideal for which we have heretofore stood. Even so they seem tolerant of a president who is reputed to have pulled down the bars of social equality between the races at the White House.

SUPPORT THE INFANT SANITARIUM

To those who come here annually, it is unnecessary to speak of the unusually effective service being rendered in the field of child rehabilitation by the Infant Sanitarium of Virginia Beach. The results accomplished here each summer season have been so outstanding and so successful as to merit the applause and praise of all who have investigated its practices, and the fame of its management has been broadcast far and wide.

Those unacquainted with the sanitarium's services may take our word for it that no more deserving charity functions in this or any other community reaches out into the poorest homes of Tidewater Virginia and brings to the beach for a vacation those unfortunate children whose health has been impaired by improper nourishment and living conditions and whose futures are uncertain because of a lack of care and attention which are the due right of the child. The results accomplished each summer give every possible reason why its services should be continued.

Each July 4, "Balloons Sale" is staged on the streets of Virginia Beach for the benefit of the sanitarium, which depends entirely upon public support for its continuance. This year, the need for funds is reported to be greater than ever before, and it is our thought that both residents and visitors will support the sale to the full extent of their ability. The futures of many children, ladies and gentlemen, depend to great measure upon your support of this annual plea.

Time of vacationing and carefree, happy days, it is well to remember those whom fortune and circumstance have cast into roles much less fortunate than our own. Laughter, rather than tears must come from such a gesture of support, healthy bodies will develop from your contributions, and many more of lots will face the next winter better prepared than ever before to withstand the dangers of disease and illness.

Remember the Infant Sanitarium on July 4.

Four Virginians in the foreign service of the federal government have been given new assignments by the state department. They are: Merrill N. ## LINCOLN CHANNEL TO THE FORE

Some months ago, when the much discussed project to deepen Lynnhaven Inlet and to construct a boat channel from the Lesser Bridge to Lynnhaven Bay was suggested by a group of county citizens led by Floyd Deary, it was agreed by those sponsoring the measure that no step would be left untaken that might have some direct bearing upon the U. S. Army Engineers' approval of the badly needed waterway improvement. It is well at this crucial time, when a survey of the proposed channel is being made by the engineers, to recall and reiterate the part played by these same citizens in carrying through their share of the contract.

To begin that story, not alone were representatives of the stagnating fishing and oyster industries in local waters interested in the program—it being pointed out to them that such a channel development would revive a business that formerly was world famous—but statistics showing the deterioration of the industry were collected and carefully compiled for official perusal. Tests to determine the degree of salinity of the water were made, a careful study was completed of tonging activities over a twenty-year period and testimony was offered to show the marked decline in the number of men employed in the industry and the equally marked decline in financial return.

The importance of the proposed channel to the continued development of the Virginia Beach resort area was graphically charted, and statistics, insofar as they were available, were submitted on this phase of the subject. The value of a channel to the Seashore State Park, now attracting national attention, was not overlooked, and, even more important, a logical argument was offered to show the real need existing for such development on the part of the Army itself. Unqualified support of the latter aspect was provided by the commandant of Fortress Monroe, whose individual proposal exceeded greatly in scope the program offered locally.

With this preliminary survey out of the way, this same uniting local group proceeded to give yet further evidences of their interest in the project. A substantial sum was collected by public subscription for the development of a channel from Long Creek into Broad Bay, suitable for the use of marine traffic interested in visiting Virginia Beach. The necessary rights of way were secured, the cooperation of the State Highway Department promised in the matter of a suitable drawbridge and the labor and materials found to cut the ditch.

All of this is history, and today a substantial flow of water is making its way through the channel which represents the first link in the completed waterways project. It is, we assert, a tribute to the public-spiritedness of that group which has labored consistently and cheerfully for this needed public improvement and a pledge of interest on the part of the community which the Army Engineers cannot very well overlook.

Now, to emphasize further that interest, plans are underway to widen and deepen the Lynnhaven Channel to conform with Army suggestions. One-quarter of the sum needed for such dredging work has been provided by the Town of Virginia Beach, whose interest in the development has not been questioned, and another similar sum pledged personally by Richard Crane. It is the hope of the sponsors that a similar portion will be subscribed by the County Board of Supervisors, with the remaining funds to be collected locally. The further work on the channel, it is understood, is contingent upon approval of the entire project by the Army Engineers.

This, then, is the status of the project to date. Early this week, a survey of the proposed channel and jetty was begun by the engineers, which action has been taken locally as a hopeful sign of approval. Although no inkling of their possible action on the program has been forthcoming, it is generally understood that the Army Engineers are sympathetic to the project, and it is hoped to win final approval through a consistent emphasis upon local interest by continuing the development subscribed locally.

So much has been written in these columns regarding the need for such improvement that we hesitate to say more. Behind the movement for the channel is more than a mere local desire to secure a toy paid for by Federal funds, as the wealth of argument clearly indicates. Not alone is the once-thriving oyster industry dependent upon such improvement, not alone is the fishing industry in need of the development, not alone are the forces of argument marshalled in a plea for a measure that means so much to the continued progressive development of Virginia Beach, nor, indeed, is this solely a matter of interest to the Army which needs an inland waterway base for Port Story.

Each one of these interests, we maintain, is sufficient to merit sound attention, and the aggregate poses a picture of necessity which we do not believe—if our presumption will be overlooked—the investigating engineers will brush aside as inconsequential. Every aspect of the situation cries aloud for support on grounds which can be recognized as logical and necessary.

We may expect a decision by the engineers in the near future. We hope for a favorable report and an early beginning of the project, but, should the decision be otherwise, it will not kill for all time the desired development. That, we believe, will come soon or late, for the project is a necessary one, but we hope—for the prompt approval because of the emphasis it will place upon county-wide development. To the securing of such approval this newspaper and the majority of county residents are pledged.

VISITORS AND TRAFFIC TICKETS

Recently, we observed from our desk a local policeman attaching a summons to the windshield of an out-of-state car which had violated the local parking ordinance by some minutes. According to the wording of the law, the action was justified, but, we wonder, would we not be serving our visitors a little more courteously and a bit more appropriately—considering our dependence upon them—by attaching to their windshield, not a summons for such a minor infraction of the law but, rather, a card explaining local traffic rules and regulations which would request the offender to be careful of his future actions?

Perhaps the policeman so observed may have had just cause for his action: the driver may have been an old offender, for all we know, or, as we suspect, the summons was forthcoming because of the infraction per se. We have been in other cities and other resort communities where we have received both summonses and cards of explanation, and, we confess, we think more kindly of those latter communities which overlooked our ignorance or carelessness and warned us politely not to repeat our offense.

It is our thought that those who framed the traffic law had no idea of such stringent enforcement as a law whose value is not to be questioned. We believe, rather, that the over-zealousness of those charged with law enforcement is responsible, and we should like to think that an order softening such strictness of duty had been executed. After all, the attitude of our visitors towards this resort is a mighty important item in future development.

Let's throw away the summons' tables on such first offenses and give the motorist, instead, a card, politely worded, informing him of his violation and requesting him to be more careful in the future. The thought and courtesy implied in that action will bring greater dividends than the small sums extracted from the visitors' pocketbooks via the police court route.

An increase of 27,368 in automobile and truck registrations from March 1 to June 1 over the corresponding period of last year has been reported by John Q. Rhodes, state director of the division of motor vehicles. The registrations represented a gain in revenue over the same period last year of $415,266.

As Others See It

ABOUT THE ANTISALOON LEAGUE

A recent issue of the Christian Century carried an editorial, entitled "The Antisaloons League Goes Republican." The editorial seems to have been inspired by letters which had been mailed from Washington by Dr. E. L. Eaton, a field secretary of the Antisaloons League.

The Antisaloons League has disclaimed responsibility for these letters, one of which, according to the Christian Century, bore the League letterhead. It appears that this letter denounced conditions under repeal and appealed for contributions to the League for the financing of a campaign to bring back prohibition.

Superintendent F. Scott McBride, President W. N. Ainsworth and Chairman James Cannon of the League's National Legislative Committee have united in the declaration that Dr. Eaton acted wholly on his own responsibility. They said his communications were sent out without consultation with the League officers and that before the Christian Century commented on them the officers had reprimanded him for sending them out.

So it seems that Dr. Eaton on his own initiative in writing a letter which prompted the Christian Century to state that the Antisaloons League had gone Republican, which would have been understood to mean that the League would oppose President Roosevelt for reelection, and that the Doctor was called on the carpet for assuming too much responsibility and, possibly, for misrepresenting the attitude of the League.

But what will be the League's attitude in the coming campaign? It will be expected, of course, to make a fight for the election of dry candidates for Congress, without regard to their party affiliation. But perhaps it will not again make a fight for or against a candidate for President, as its leaders did in 1928. Hundreds of thousands of dry Democrats supported Mr. Hoover in that year, some of them because the Democratic candidate was an avowed wet but most of them because he was a Catholic. Bishop Cannon and other dry leaders may hesitate to champion any Presidential candidate this year. They did their cause a disservice eight years ago and they would not do it a service now by pursuing the course they followed then. They may be opposed to Mr. Roosevelt, but he has little reason to fear their opposition, not only because dry sentiment is not as strong as formerly but because the religious issue will not figure in the approaching campaign. — Bristol Herald-Courier.

"EQUAL RIGHTS"

The National Woman's party, which for some years has had before Congress an amendment to establish absolute equal rights between men and women in this country, sees some hope of success of its efforts in a recent favorable report of a sub-committee favoring the presentation of the proposed resolution. The amendment would wipe out all existing legal difference in the United States between men and women. The possible passage of such an amendment is viewed as important largely in the psychological reaction which would tend to discourage all differences in pay for men and women rendering similar services. In wiping out the protective legislation for women in industry it would also tend to equalize the benefits and opportunities to be derived by women submitting to similar regulations established for men. It is viewed in many quarters as the final step in equalization, and the climax of a prolonged and bitter fight begun years ago to place women and men on exactly the same basis economically, socially and politically, in the country.

While the measure is said to be advocated by 50 women's organizations in the country, it likewise is opposed by numerous such groups who look upon the final equalization of woman's position with that of man as inconsistent with her biological makeup. The conferring of privileges would require also the imposition of duties, and in time of war, under such amendment, woman would not be exempt from bearing arms. Neither would her higher duties as mother relieve her from the onerous task of serving the state ahead of her family.

It is true that the vast majority of women are entirely without representation in the matter. Their more militant sisters constitute the powerful minority which, in the end, doubtless will succeed in securing the passage of the amendment. But for those employed who seek to wipe out differences in pay and limitations of opportunity should seek a more direct method and not encumber all women with the possibility of shouldering burdens which are the logical responsibilities of men, and which merely become additional tasks to be performed along with the already multifarious duties which must already remain within the province of woman's sphere by virtue of her sex. — Newport News Daily Press.

BETTER CHANCES

Exceedingly good news awaits the college graduates of 1939. University departmental heads, who usually have advanced information on possible jobs for senior students in their departments find more jobs are open for them than at any other time since 1931.

Agriculture, industry and business are looking for college graduates this year. Many businesses and industrial organizations have been faced with a gap in their personnel forces because of depression economies. As a result, not only are there four times as many requests for college graduates this year as in 1935, but the starting wage level has risen.

Whereas the top salary a young graduate could expect last year was $100 a month, compensation this year is $125 for the best positions and $100 for "average" jobs. Those that formerly paid practically nothing now offer up to $85 a month.

This represents the beginning of a foothold for youth. The absence of that foothold has been one of the great tragedies of the depression—Iowa City, Ia., Press-Citizen.

RURAL INSTITUTE BEGINS JULY 28

Conservation of Agricultural Resources Is Theme of 3-Day Session.

The eighth annual session of Virginia's "Institute of Rural Affairs" to be held on the campus of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute July 28, 29 and 30, will have as its theme "The Conservation of Our Agricultural Resources." Though J. R. Hutcheson, director of the Virginia Agricultural Extension Division, and his program committee, are still working out the details of the three-day program, a number of prominent speakers and authorities have already accepted invitations to attend.

The institute will be composed of meetings of the State Agricultural Conservation Board, the Virginia Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs, and the Farmers' Institute. It is expected that the program will draw at least 2,000 farm men and women. For joint meetings in the evenings, the college's new auditorium, seating 3,000 people, will be used.

Conservation Theme
 Morning sessions of the 29th and 30th will be divided between an economics section and a standards of living section. Conservation of soils, forests, wild life, water power, and human resources will be topics of discussion. Afternoons will be given over to the various agricultural and home economics departments for discussions of farm and home problems, demonstrations, and field trips.

Among those who will lead discussions at the morning sessions are Dr. H. A. Morgan of the Tennessee Valley Authority, Dr. D. S. Myer of the Soil Conservation Service, Dr. Carl C. Taylor of the Reclamation Administration, Wilbur C. Hall of the State Conservation and Development Commission, Allen Eaton of the Russell Sage Foundation, and Mrs. Eudora Richardson of Richmond.

Evening speakers already engaged are Mrs. Charles Shuttler of the National Farm Bureau, who will discuss "Conserving Our Heritage," Chester C. Davis of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, "The Necessity for Agricultural Planning"; and the Honorable John Temple Graves of Birmingham, Alabama, "The Conservation of Human Resources."

Dormitories Available
 College dormitories will be made available to those attending the institute at a cost of only 50 cents per person per night. Those bringing their own bed clothing, towels and toilet articles can obtain lodging for the entire institute for a nominal charge of $1 each. TRAVELS IN TWO DEMOCRACIES
 By Edmund Wilson
 Harcourt, Brace, 322 pp. $2.50

A Review by S. Rains Wallace, Jr., Assistant in Psychology, University of Virginia.

A most important question in social and governmental theory today is that which concerns the condition and potentialities of the Russian confederacy. There could be more exciting to the imagination of lay and scientific minds alike than an experiment which employs a large percentage of the world's population as its glorified guinea pigs. Whether properly conceived and executed or not, it is a work which is bound to produce results that an excited world must spend years in analyzing. Unfortunately enough, it has proven rather difficult to find out just what the results have been. The activities of propagandists, honest or dishonest, the well-known tendency upon the part of man to see that which he desires to see and to overlook the rest have resulted in a great mass of literature which has as its outstanding characteristic an hopeless inconsistency. The situation has become akin to the verbal "tis-tan't" battles of childhood. Edmund Wilson, however, bids fair to succeed where so many others have failed. He brings to his task two all-important characteristics of the good reporter—a healthy freedom from prejudice and an ability to observe with real discrimination. There results an exposition of the Russian situation which we may call convincing even if we are unable to conclusively call it correct.

As the title, "Travels in Two Democracies," implies, this book is an attempt to draw a parallel and, indirectly, a comparison between Russia and the United States. We must hasten to add, however, that Mr. Wilson does not labor this theme. For the most part, he has been content to describe what he has seen and heard in his travels through both countries. The section which deals with America is composed of short and vivid sketches of typically American scenes and institutions. They are selected in the sense that there is an attempt to deal with representative subjects, but no effort is made either to gloss over or to blacken. Thus, we have a laudatory account of Jane Addams' Hull House beside a bitter discussion of internal and external labor troubles in central Illinois. An amused and amusing report of a meeting of Buchanians is preceded by an honestly inflated expose of the injustices dealt out to the striking dairy farmers of New York. An attempt to give a picture of the general culture and mores of our own particular society takes the form of short bits of fiction—sketches in the modern manner which indicate that Mr. Wilson can interpret as well as report.

It is the manner in which the book deals with matters familiar to us which convinces the writer of the honesty and veracity of the section upon the Russian experiment. This book contains little which could have been written by a Hearstite or a fiery Red. There is a fine sense of balance and a thorough respect for reality in its own right. If Mr. Wilson has an axe to grind, he is the cleverest and most dangerous of our many propagandists.

The Russian situation, as he presents it, includes both promising and disappointing features. No one, so far as he can discover, is starving or, as some whom he has seen in America, picking his food from garbage dumps. The housing situation is seen to be improving with rapidly and good taste. There is present in a large portion of the population a healthy sense of values. On the other hand, free speech and free press are notable for their non-existence. Wilson encounters a surprising tendency upon the part of the man in the streets to refer to Stalin only by a vague nickname, to refer to governmental policies little if at all. There is still present a patent unwillingness to attempt to understand or even interest in the decision of the men in power. This was, to the writer, the only thoroughly dangerous aspect of the entire experiment. One may be enthusiastic about the accomplishments of Stalin's regime and still wonder what will happen when less sincere individuals are invested with the unlimited power which he enjoys.

Mr. Wilson is conservative in his final conclusions, believing that a truly successful state must combine the best qualities of his two democracies. He leaves the way open, however, for a very optimistic prophecy as to Russia's future. His account of the younger products of the new system are both enthusiastic and inspiring. One is left with the conviction that they have much to contribute to the ideal of world progress. Other readers may draw other inferences but, nevertheless, "Travels in Two Democracies" demands the attention of any who would keep themselves abreast of modern history and thought.

In Sweden they say that the best book on Sweden is written by Agnes Rothery, a Virginia resident. Her latest book is "Finland: The New Nation," and there seems to be no reason why it shouldn't be considered the best book on Finland. Certainly, it is both comprehensive and interesting, and deals with a nation which most travel-writers haven't had time to get around to yet.

Little could be more amazing than the America Oscar Wilde discovered in Lloyd Lewis and Henry Justin Smith's "Oscar Wilde Discovers America," for America of the '90's was chasing the demons ruin and nicotine, romanticizing Jesse James, while at the same time trying to superimpose a culture upon a very new and gigantic wealth. Brought over as a publicity stunt for the Gilbert and Sullivan opera which lampooned him and his circle, Oscar Wilde became a storm center for American exponents of culture, who were polite or impolite as the case might be; for society, which apparently didn't know what to make of his "message;" and for the press, which took up editorial space to attack or defend him, or burst forth into the most ridiculous of cartoons. Somehow, one comes out of this account of Oscar Wilde's lecture tour with a better impression of the gentleman than the tradition of long hair, sunflowers and lilies would lead one to expect. The book is overly long, but it is amusing to the nth degree. It is well worth the perusal of anyone who uses judgment as to how much to consume at a time.

The 1936 volume of E. J. O'Brien's "Best Short Stories" strikes the same high average which made this series a literary institution. Not all agree with Mr. O'Brien's choices, but then, an editor is entitled to his opinions. "Mixed Company," a collection of Eleanor Merwin Kelly's stories, on the other hand, has no literary pretensions, but the touches of sentiment will soothe those who prefer story to style.

Defies Afternoon "Let-Down"

By Jane Rogers

GLADYS SWARTHOUT, Metropolitan Opera star, appearing in her latest screen success, "Give Us This Night," guards her health as her most precious possession. That dreary afternoon period, known as the "fatigue hour," holds no terrors for Miss Swarthout, for she fortifies herself every afternoon, even while on location, with a light repast, consisting of a sandwich or a plate of cookies served with a glass of cool Hawaiian pineapple juice.

Sandwiches, according to Miss Swarthout, should possess substance and tang, cheese or rye, is unthinkable without the traditional mustard spread, and the popular ham sandwich is all the better for the addition of ketchup or chili sauce.

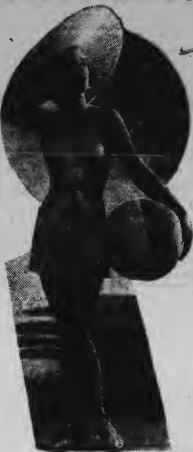

Hard boiled eggs on white bread is a good combination, and so are fried eggs spread generously with chili sauce. Molasses cookies are Miss Swarthout's favorite, and with them she serves a tall glass of her favorite punch.

Bridge Cocktail

1 cup Hawaiian pineapple juice 3 tbsps. powdered sugar 1 cup orange juice 1 cup apricot juice 1 cup lemon juice 1 cup maraschino cherries

Mix all ingredients except cherries. Add more sugar if desired. Serve cold, with one maraschino cherry in glass. (The cocktail will be more snappy if ginger ale is added just before serving.) Serves six.

COOK AND BE COOL

Crisp salads, cold foods chilled and refreshing—frozen desserts! This is the time of year when we really need our refrigerators to give the proper zest to summer meals. We are not suggesting that nothing but cold food be served. Even when the thermometer is high our systems require some hot food. All year round we should serve hot foods, very hot, and cold foods, very cold, but in summer the crispness of vegetables does much to stimulate jaundiced appetites and encourage us to eat the foods which are best for us.

Frequent visits to market where fresh vegetables are attractively displayed will practically compel us to serve them freely. For who can resist the glistening green of fresh spinach, beans, peas or peppers, as well as the various varieties of lettuce. The color contrasts between carrots, tomatoes, egg plant, etc., will add interest to our menus, and a crisp pan full of various vegetables will help make meal planning easy. Always wash and discard unedible leaves or stems of your vegetables before they are placed in the refrigerator. If they should be very much wilted be sure to soak them for a few minutes so that they may drink in the moisture which they have lost in standing.

Did you ever try serving crisp raw vegetables? Those who have vegetable gardens undoubtedly enjoy eating young turnips and carrots right from the garden, but they taste even better when eaten crisp and chilled from the refrigerator. Here are a few 'cold cooking' suggestions to help you through the sultry days:

Salt-and-Salad
4 c. cubed potato
Onion as desired
6 hard cooked eggs
Kraft Cheese
1/2 c. mayonnaise
1/2 c. pickle relish
Salt
pepper

Boil about 6 medium potatoes in salted water until just done. Cube and while warm add salt and pepper to taste, onion if liked, pickle relish and mayonnaise. Allow to stand for one hour.

Hard cook the eggs, cut in half lengthwise, remove yolks, season with a little mustard, salt, pepper and a very little mayonnaise. Replace in the whites and insert a slice of sliced cheese. To make the salt cut slices from a half pound brick of cheese. Cut a section from each slice to make it square and then cut each square in two diagonally.

To serve: Place the salad on leaf lettuce on a rectangular platter. Sprinkle with minced parsley or water cress and make a procession of 'sail boats' over the top. Serves 8.

Black-Eyed Susan Salad
1 can kidney beans
3 c. shredded carrots
1/2 c. sliced celery
1 tbsp. chives or green onion tops
3 tbsp. French Dressing
Rinse sauce from one can of kidney beans, drain and add shredded carrot, (raw or cooked) celery which has been sliced thin, onion cut fine and 3 tbsp. French dressing.

French Dressing
1/4 tsp. salt
1-5 tsp. pepper
1 tbsp. vinegar
1 cup olive oil

Mix dry ingredients and gradually whip in the oil. This gives a well-blended dressing.

To serve: Mound in a salad bowl over crisp lettuce, making a black-eyed Susan of strips of carrot with a slice of ripe olive in the center. Individual salads may be made in the same way. Serves 10.

Buttermilk Sherbert

2 c. buttermilk
1/2 c. sugar
1 c. crushed pineapple
1 egg white (unbeaten)
1/2 tsp. vanilla
Combine buttermilk, sugar and pineapple thoroughly. Place in tray in super-freezer and freeze to a mush. Remove from tray to a bowl, add egg white and vanilla. Beat until light and fluffy. Return to freezer and continue freezing.

Lemon Sherbert

1 c. granulated sugar
1 pt. water
1/2 c. lemon juice
2 tsp. orange juice
1-1/2 tsp. salt
2 egg whites
1/2 c. thin cream
Cook sugar and water slowly for 10 minutes. Cool, add to strained fruit juices. Freeze partially, then beat, add cream and stiffly beaten egg whites. Freeze again.

District Attorney, in opposing the application, had argued that a purchased option on a dog was a mere subterfuge for a $2 bet. "Very possibly this is true," Justice Bonyne wrote, "but a wrongful intent on one side is not enough to satisfy the requirements of the law. Were the rule otherwise, every cotton and commodity broker or dealer in the land would be in jail before night."

Justice Bonyne then went on: "More than a half century ago, P. T. Barnum recorded the fact that the American people delight in being humbugged and such is still the national mood. Nowhere is this trait more clearly shown than in this field of gambling. A church affair or bazaar would scarcely be complete without a bevy of winsome damsels selling chances on bed quilts, radios, electric irons and a host of other things."

Church Gaming Cited
"If the proceeds are to be devoted to the ladies' sewing circle or the dominie's vacation, no sin is perceived and the local prosecutor, whoever or wherever he might be, stays his hand. But if a couple of dusky youths are apprehended rolling the bones to a state of moderate warmth blind justice perceives the infamy of the performance and the law takes its course."

"Sweepstakes and lotteries are unspeakably vile and yet through them we have contributed so many millions to the Irish hospitals that it is rumored patriotic Irishmen volunteer to have their tonsils and appendices removed just to keep the hospital beds occupied and the nurses employed."

"For a generation or more, betting at horse races was unlawful. After this prolonged burst of morality, the Legislature suddenly discovered the need of improving the breed of horses. In a back-hand way, this Legislature restored race track betting by removing the criminal penalties. But let no one suspect that our best citizens repair to Belmont Park and other nearby tracks for the purpose of betting or gambling. Perish the thought, for their brains rest on higher things. Improving the breed of horses is their aim."

THE YOUNG STAR-GAZER

On many a wakeful winter night
I from my window watch the sky:
Glittering, gleaming, twinkling bright,
I see a million stars go by.
They rise behind the eastern hill,
And through long hours when people rest
They glide in silence on, until
They vanish in the distant west;
And while I watch, it seems to me
The shining points (had I a glass)
Are ships upon a darkened sea With lights that signal as they pass:

And that our world is under weigh And sailing on thro' darkness, too,
Seeking the haven, far away,
That vessels of the star-fleet do.
A happy voyage!—I wish them all,
And hope, perhaps, another boy Will see my lamp, and wave, and call Across the darkness: "Ship
ahoy!"

Across the fields swept out). She

Below the surface of the leaf, she knew
The garden snake, the beetle's

The darkness shattered where her

We, too, have watched the hills, but not to see
A cloth of color and of sharp de-

Nor have we understood the grow-

That they break faith whose oaths

To make no further cacatombs

Be deaf to them in death as they Are deaf to memories of you that

Summer Comfort on Lawn and Terrace

THE new examples of out-of-door furniture, with synthetic finishes and materials that defy sun and rain, are giving lawn and terrace new beauty this season, and bringing home to the housewife practical expressions of what the chemical industry is doing to make life in general more comfortable and more attractive.

The three open-air sets shown above have either painted wood or metal frames and are upholstered in Fabrikoid which has a lacquered surface that resists water and insect damage, is easily cleaned with a damp cloth and adapts itself to many colorful and interesting patterns and surfaces. They show the season's trend toward stripes in out-of-doors upholstery, either in contrasting colors or in self stripes where the grain of the material is ridged or otherwise patterned. Here are chairs and gliders that suggest the long summer afternoon, and the delight of cool relaxation.

At the lower left is a self stripes smart and comfortable group of folding furniture. The chairs are painted white and are upholstered in blue and white chevron-striped lacquered fabric that can be kept fresh throughout the season. A chromium steel arm having a stripe of the same shade. This is an ideal chair for any season.

Below, the glider and matching chair are covered with water-repellent fabric in canary yellow striped with brown, the cushions of the glider being detachable and having apron fronts. A set of durable and appealing charm for a comfortable summer porch.

The most historic and dramatic events in the life of Henry, and the stirring events of his time, will be depicted in the great pageant-drama to be staged at Hanover Court House, July 15, 16, and 17. Each scene will be accurately portrayed and the costumes will be authentic.

Commenting on "Liberty or Death" as penned by Mr. Campbell, Dr. Douglas S. Freeman, editor of the Richmond News Leader, writes, after reading the script: "Mr. Campbell has done a most notable piece of work in writing this pageant which I think will be one of the finest ever used in America." Dr. H. J. Eckenrode, historian, writes: "It is a powerful, sweeping drama, a splendid piece of characterization, and the finest pageant I have ever read."

TENANCY GAINS NOTED IN NATION

Trend Away From Individual Ownership Is Big Problem Facing R.A.

The trend from individual ownership to farm tenancy was described as one of the major problems of the United States by John M. Bratten, Rehabilitation Supervisor of the Resettlement Administration for Norfolk and Princess Anne Counties. Mr. Bratten quoted figures compiled by the Resettlement Administration showing that nearly half of all farmers in the United States are now tenants.

"Every agricultural section of the country," he said "has some tenancy. It ranges from around eight per cent in the New England States to better than forty-five per cent in parts of the corn belt and a high of more than seventy-five per cent of all farmers in some part of the cotton belt."

The figures of the 1935 census of agriculture indicate that farm tenancy is still increasing in all major sections of the country. Tenancy in the states of this region is as follows: North Carolina, 142,158 tenants, gain of 3 per cent since 1930; Virginia, 58,386, gain of 16 per cent since 1930; Kentucky, 103,215 tenants, gain of 16 per cent since 1930; Tennessee, 126,007, tenants, gain of 11 per cent since 1930; West Virginia, 27,021 tenants, gain of 76 per cent since 1930.

THE SNAPSHOT GUILD

"Off-Guard" Photography

Patient and strategic stalking of the subjects until they were "off guard" netted these interesting snapshots.

TAKING snapshots of people when they are not aware that they are about to be "shot," thereby catching them with natural expressions and in unposed positions, is often called "candid" photography, but we of The Snapshot Guild like the words "off-guard" photography as more truly descriptive.

"Candid" implies there is that kind of expression on the face of the subject and it may not always be there, but there is no doubt that for a natural expression he must be "off-guard" at the moment the picture is made, which is also just what the professional photographer waits to capture in making a studio portrait.

"Off-guard" photography is lots of fun, but there are important points about it that need to be observed to get satisfactory results. You can't "shoot" thoughtlessly without regard to the direction and strength of the light, nor can you forget that exposure and focus are just as important as for a premeditated pose. Nor should you overlook background. This means that if you are going to catch your subject unawares, you may have to do some strategic stalking for the right position.

Supposing, for example, you want a picture of Grandpa outdoors, ambling one of the children. First, observe the intensity of the light and

CONTINUED DRY SPELL HARMFUL

Severe Drouth Conditions Hamper Retail Trade in Southeast Section.

Retail trade yielded some of its recent buoyancy under the depressing influence of hot weather and increasingly severe drouth conditions in the Southeast, Northwest and other scattered areas of the country, but industrial and employment levels continued high, according to nationwide reports to the Department of Commerce last week.
Minneapolis reported the drouth area enlarging in South Central North Dakota and North Central South Dakota with small-grain crops ruined in most of the area, while hope was held out for pastures and forage crops, contingent upon early rain. In Minnesota and Eastern South Dakota crops were good to excellent. Wheat conditions in the Kansas City and Omaha regions were good, as were corn, wheat and oats in the St. Louis area, although insect damage was spreading. In Middle and East Tennessee, cotton and corn were the only crops that had escaped serious impairment with pastures and vegetation parched. Similar conditions prevailed in Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, Virginia and Kentucky, but in some instances, higher prices compensated partially for the short yields. Tobacco land continued too dry for planting in Kentucky and plants were rotting in beds. General rains in Texas revived range conditions to the most favorable in several years, while agricultural conditions in the Seattle region were greatly improved by light to moderate rains.

Farm Trend Noted
The drift of almost two million people from towns and cities to farms in the five-year period from 1931 to 1935 was a major factor in making the farm population of January 1, 1935, the largest ever recorded by a census, according to reports just made public. The movement was so extensive that 1 out of every 16 persons living on farms on that date had, it was shown, lived in urban centers five years earlier. Most of the flow was said to represent the countryward migration of the unemployed and others unable to obtain work in industries, to escape idleness, reduce expenses and to raise food for family use. The Census report said the movement seemed to be primarily of whole families who returned to farms once abandoned, to new farms and to uncultivated houses on farms operated by their relatives and friends. Secretary Roper this week advocated further study of the problem and the possible economic effect.

Grocery chain store sales in May were 2% lower than May 1935. May sales of 28 chain store and 2 mail order companies were 16.41% higher than May a year ago. Cotton consumed in the ten months ending May 31 was 5,100-320 bales against 4,586,173 in the comparable 1934 period, while exports gained from 4,173,762 to 5,518,804 in the same comparable periods. Industrial pay rolls in Rhode Island in May were 5.9% higher than the 1935 month. The value of construction in 7 Eastern States in the first five months of the year gained 81% over the same period last year to $996,523,000.

Continued employment gains were reported. A shortage of skilled men in airplane construction plants was reported in Los Angeles where May employment was 34% above April. Birmingham steel plants were employing 30 to 30% more than last year. The Pennsylvania Railroad shops in Wilmington had peak employment, while Memphis was at the 1930 peak. There was some building hesitancy in Minneapolis on account of labor troubles.

Los Angeles, Cincinnati, Jacksonville, Birmingham, Buffalo, Boston, Philadelphia and Louisville experienced industrial expansions and high operating schedules. General Houses, Inc., of Chicago received an order for a 16-room steel panel home and 3-car garage to be erected near Boston at a cost of $60,000. At Fort Lauderdale, Fla., a hotel started during the "boom days" was being completed at a cost of $150,000. At Seattle the Alaska Steamship Co., was planning to operate the largest fleet of carriers in history. The cotton goods market in Boston had the best week of the year with sales exceeding estimated production, while mills had a heavy volume of unfilled orders. Cotton goods sales in New York also showed an improved condition.

NOTICE is hereby given that on July 6th, 1934, at eleven o'clock A. M. the Board of Supervisors of Princess Anne County, Virginia, intends to adopt the following ordinance, which was duly proposed at its regular meeting held on Monday, the 22nd day of June, 1934, at ten o'clock A. M.:

"AN ORDINANCE PROHIBITING THE DRIVING OF MOTOR VEHICLES ENGINES AND TRAINS IN PRINCESS ANNE COUNTY VIRGINIA, BY PER-

SONS WHILE UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF ALCOHOL, BRANDY, RUM, WHISKY, GIN, WINE, BEER, LAGER BEER, ALE, PARTER, STOUT OR ANY OTHER LIQUID, BEVERAGE OR ARTICLE CONTAINING ALCOHOL, OR UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF ANY OTHER SELF-ADMINISTERED INTOXICANT OR DRUG OF WHATSOEVER NATURE; TO PRESCRIBE THE MINIMUM PUNISHMENT WHICH MAY BE IMPOSED AND TO PROVIDE FOR THE REVOCATION OF THE RIGHTS OF PERSONS CONVICTED OF VIOLATING THIS ORDINANCE TO DRIVE ANY SUCH MOTOR VEHICLE, ENGINE OR TRAIN.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE Board of Supervisors of Princess Anne County:

It shall be unlawful for any person to drive or operate any automobile or other motor vehicle, car, truck, engine, or train, while under the influence of alcohol, brandy, rum, whiskey, gin, wine, beer, lager beer, ale, porter, stout, or any other liquid, beverage or article containing alcohol or while under the influence of any narcotic drug, or any other self-administered intoxicant or drug of whatsoever nature.

Any person who violates any provision of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars or imprisonment for not less than one month nor more than six months, either or both in the discretion of the court or jury trying the same, for a first offense, and the court may, in its discretion, suspend the sentence during the good behavior of the person convicted. Any person convicted of a second, or other subsequent offense under this act shall be punishable by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars and by imprisonment for not less than one month nor more than one year, and no court shall suspend the sentence in any such case.

The judgment of conviction under this ordinance shall of itself operate to deprive the person convicted, of the right to drive or operate any such vehicle, conveyance, engine or train in this County for a period of one year from the date of such judgment, and if for a second or other subsequent offense, for a period of three years from the date of the judgment of conviction thereof. If any person has heretofore been convicted of violating any similar act of this State and thereafter is convicted of violating the provisions of section one of this ordinance such conviction shall for the purpose of this ordinance be a subsequent offense and shall be punished accordingly. If any person so convicted shall, during the time for which he is deprived of his right so to do, drive or operate any such vehicle, conveyance, engine or train in this County, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

The Clerks of all courts of record and the trial and juvenile justice, shall, within thirty days after final conviction of any person in his court under this ordinance, report the fact thereof and the name, postoffice address and street address of such person, together with the license plate number on the vehicle operated by

ADDED CHANNEL CHARGES SHARED

for Lynnhaven Inlet and for the channel into Long Creek is now being made by the Norfolk office of the U. S. Army Engineers. Should the local proposal be accepted, an approximate $500,000 will be expended upon the improvements, regarded as necessary for a revival of the oyster and fishing industry and as a means of providing a boat channel and anchorage near Virginia Beach.

Project Widely Favored

Funds for the inauguration of the cut were approved by the Town Council and the Board of Supervisors at meetings held some months ago. In approving the latest request for additional assistance, it was the sentiment of the councilmen that the project was a highly desirable one calculated to serve the best interests of the developing resort community.

Following a discussion by the council, it was agreed that Mr. Patton should take up with the League of Virginia Municipalities the application for a spiritualist medium's license made by Mrs. E. D. Boswell, known professionally as Madame Lottie. Town Attorney Willard Ashburn maintained that the Town code did not permit the licensing of such an individual.

To Improve Street

Thirtieth Street, from Atlantic Avenue west for a distance of a block and one-half, will be hard-surfaced, it was agreed by the councilmen. Mrs. Bennett, owner of the Mercedes Apartments, located on that street, appeared before the council to urge immediate action on the project, the condition of which, she said, was a deterrent to renting the apartments.

A one-hour parking limit was decreed for Pacific Avenue from Seventeenth Street south and north for a distance of 150 feet. It also was agreed to place full stop signs on all streets intersecting Seventeenth Street and Thirty-first Street.

An additional policeman will be employed for a nine-week period, beginning July 1, for duty in the Cypress Avenue area. $225 was appropriated for the officer's maintenance upon the request of Chief of Police McClannan.

Bottled Energy For Noted Flyer

Clyde Pangborn, well known flyer who was one of the few to successfully span the Pacific Ocean, is pictured above having his daily bottle of milk. "It's my daily bottle of energy," he says. "A bottle of milk will carry me a long way on a flight." He further guards his health by drinking milk only from the sterile glass bottle which protects the quality of purity of the milk.

LOCAL B & L UNIT TO PAY DIVIDEND

or about July 10.

Recently, five loans on Virginia Beach property were made by the association. Two other loans, it was learned, are to be closed this month, with additional requests under consideration.

Officers and directors of the savings and loan unit have expressed satisfaction over the course pursued thus far. The securing of additional savings funds, they asserted, will broaden the scope and usefulness of the association to Virginia Beach and Princess Anne county, allowing to the prospective home-builder the same high type of opportunity which is elsewhere to be found, all fully protected by Federal guarantee.

All bridges in Virginia damaged by spring floods will be open to traffic by July 1, according to State Highway Commissioner Shirley.

A GIFT

from the Indians

WE ARE indebted to the Indians for many things. One of the chief of these is corn. For hundreds, perhaps thousands of years before Columbus took the grains of corn which were to spread its cultivation all over the world, the Indians had cultivated and eaten this important food. Just as we prize corn most highly, so did the Indians. Each year the six Indian tribes of the Iroquois family celebrated Green Corn Festival—four days of feast and thanksgiving to the Great Spirit who had given them corn.

To Show Our Gratitude

Housewives, today, carry on the festival, in a different way, however. Probably four days each week they serve corn in one way or another—roasting ears, corn puddings, corn salads, corn muffins, or in some other delicious form. Canners have varied the styles of canning corn in order to suit the tastes and convenience of housewives.

For example, when corn was first canned it was almost all "cream style"—the rich creamy mixture which is especially fine for making cream soups, soufflés, corn puddings and chowders. In recent years, however, in order to meet the demand for new ways to serve corn, the "whole kernel" corn became available in cans. This corn is picked at "roasting ear" stage and the entire kernel is cut off and remains separate when in the can. It is particularly suited for sautéing, corn cakes, scalloped dishes, for stuffing peppers, for fritters, or for use in making a dressing for fowl. In 1934 one-fifth of the total pack of white corn was in this style.

an indication of widespread publicity of a general resort nature through those sections of the country regarded as most likely drawing spots for the beach.

Through a further agreement made with the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, a photographer from that organization will be at the Beach daily during the months of July and August in order to secure the maximum amount of pictorial publicity. Hotels and places of amusement will be canvassed regularly for likely subjects, with the emphasis placed upon individuals sojourning here from the larger cities.

Announcement was made of the forthcoming incorporation of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce. Wade Kornejey, formerly a member of the executive committee, was elected secretary of the organization, replacing Miss Mary B. Lankford, who resigned to take another position.
